Anti-Inflation Plan—Bennett

By BRUCE YEMEN

An "anti-inflationary" provincial budget 14 per cent bigger than the first billion-dollar B.C. budget one year ago was presented today by Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Revenues in the coming year will soar $141 million to a record $1,166,177,415 and expenditures will rise by the same amount to $1,165,460,000, Bennett estimated.

A variety of increases in welfare payments and aid to homeowners, promised in the 1969 provincial election, are included in the budget. There is no increase in taxes which Bennett describes as Canada's lowest.

Bennett told a press conference the budget is a "realistic" one in a period of inflationary pressure and defended the 14 per cent increase as anti-inflationary because his budget is balanced.

The surplus predicted is less than $1,000,000 but past experience indicates a much larger surplus can be expected in a good economic year.

Small Increases for Many People

Among the new proposals in the budget, read to the legislature by Bennett this afternoon, are the following, effective April 1:

The annual homeowner grant raised from $150 to $160 maximum.

Supplementary old age allowance payments for old age pensioners raised to a maximum of $150.

Social allowances raised by $5 per head of household and for each dependent.

Nursing home social assistance rates increased by $35 a month to a maximum of $280 and boarding home rates increased $15 a month to a maximum of $135.

A $500 grant or $2,500 second mortgage for purchase of older homes by tenants of two years' residence, the proposal to last for one year only, possibly to be renewed later.

Municipal Per Capita Grant Up

Municipal per capita grants raised $2 to $30, the increase tied to social welfare spending. It should add about $295,000 to the Greater Victoria municipal budget.

Bennett said $25 million will be added to the provincial home acquisition grant fund, $35 million will be invested in the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway to help build an extension to Dease Lake, 175 miles north of Stewart. Also $7 million will be added to the civil service salary budget.

He said he has "recommended" greater succession duty exemptions which would "materially reduce succession duties on our citizens."

A bill to be introduced today will raise exemptions on valuation of survivors' pensions from $100 to $250 and will completely exempt the family home, Bennett said.

Another bill would amend the municipal sewage treatment plant act but no details were given. The province currently pays 75 per cent of treatment plant costs over a basic two-mill levy.

Spending will be slowed up in all departments except labor, which shows a drop of $2.4 million as a result of the final $10 million in payments to the Workmen's Compensation Board being made in the current year.

Bennett said in the budget speech that "rampant inflation" continues to be the "greatest threats to the free world economies today."

He pledged to support the federal government in the fight against inflation and said "this

PM Promises Action To End Dock Shutdown

Times News Services

British Columbia ports are at a standstill today as longshoremen picket for the second time in three months.

Prime Minister Trudeau has promised government action if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Picket lines were thrown up in Victoria late Thursday afternoon but no ships are at Ogden Point docks at present.

Dock workers in Vancouver and New Westminster began their walkout Thursday morning despite an order to work from the union, after the province's 3,200 longshoremen rejected the latest contract proposal by a 51 per cent margin Wednesday night.

The prime minister's announcement that the government has "made a decision" to take action in the dispute came today in the Commons in reply to a question from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield. Trudeau said plans for intervention would be announced in detail "in due course."

SHIPS IDLE

In Vancouver harbor 15 ocean-going ships are sitting idle, including four freighters which were loading grain when the work stoppage went into effect.

During a six-week strike which was suspended in November when the dockers approved a 90-day truce, the National Harbors Board operated grain loading facilities and the union provided gangs to handle grain cargoes in compliance an undertaking given earlier by the union to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

Longshoremen's union representatives were meeting today in an attempt to resolve differences which led to rejection of a recommended three-year settlement.

Federal mediator William Kelly met briefly with both sides Thursday, but said afterward he has received no commitment from either side to talk again.

FARMERS WORRIED

Meanwhile on the prairies the new dock shutdown is causing widespread concern among grain producers. G. L. Harrold, president of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said today the shutdown will have "drastic effects on Canada's export markets of grain."

Farmers' Union of Alberta president Paul Babey of Edmonton said "it seems to me the government will have no alternative but to see that the grain is kept moving.

"The western farmer is hit severely any time there is a stoppage but especially this year when grain delivery opportunities have been limited."

BANKS OFFER TO ASSIST ON INFLATION

Times News Services

TORONTO—Canada's chartered banks announced today they may join the fight against inflation by not boosting service charges this year and by keeping loan rates in line with changes in personal savings deposit interest rates.

A. H. Crockett, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, made public a letter to Dr. John Young, prices and income commission chairman, agreeing to the restraints, depending on "widespread acceptance" by business leaders.

Opposition Not Welcome At Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield today the government will not invite opposition MPs to a federal-provincial conference later this month because they have been "more of a hindrance than a help" in fighting inflation.

Trudeau, in a Commons exchange, said the government would not object to provincial delegations including opposition party members.

"But this supposes the provincial governments are able to find some constructive and co-operative members in the opposition."

The two-day conference, which begins Feb. 16, will discuss the economic situation, pollution and the report of the federal-provincial tax-structure committee.

700-Ton Egyptian Ship Sunk by Israeli Jets

Times News Services

Israeli jets sank a 711-ton Egyptian minelayer in the Red Sea today soon after Egyptian frogmen attacked two Israeli ships in the port of Elath harbor, sinking one and causing the other to be beached.

The Egyptian minelayer went to the bottom in the Hurghada sector of the gulf, south of Shadwan Island. The vessel was identified as one of the T-43 type, equipped with two gun turrets with twin-barrelled cannon, machine-guns, mine-laying equipment and anti-submarine devices.

The ship normally carries 80 crew members.

A Cairo spokesman described the ship as "an auxiliary supply vessel" and that all crew members were rescued.

Egypt said it shot down two Israeli Mirages and that artillery drove off Israeli helicopters trying to rescue one of the pilots who parachuted to a nearby island.

In addition to the ship attack, Israeli said its planes carried out six hours of raids against Egyptian targets along the Suez Canal and that two bombing attacks struck deep inside Egypt, one 200 miles south of Cairo.

It was the eighth Israeli air raid deep into Egypt since Jan. 7 and the third against Tel el-Kabir, located about 30 miles from Ismailia.

Earlier, two Egyptian jet fighter-bombers streaked across the Suez canal.

An Israeli spokesman said they hit a UN observation post

The spokesman made no mention of casualties to UN personnel but said two other Egyptian planes made bombing runs south of Port Taufiq and wounded one Israeli soldier.

Phosphate Ban Likely—Greene

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal regulations to control phosphate content of detergents will come into effect "not later than this summer" and phosphates probably will be banned within three years, Resources Minister J. J. Greene said today.

Earlier in the Commons he said Canada will work with the United States and the provinces to control the threat phosphates pose to clean lakes and rivers.

Mr. Greene said "gentle persuasion" hasn't worked with phosphate manufacturers and soap makers and more forceful action is the result.

"We are going to regulate to the ultimate end of banning," he said in an interview.

Manufacturers wanted the taxpayer to build plants to remove phosphates from sewage but this would cost billions and would be too slow.

They were working to find a replacement for phosphates in detergents and regulations would probably make them "work harder." Nitrates were the most probable replacement but Mr. Greene warned that it isn't known how they will affect bodies of water.

Phosphates are said to stimulate growth of algae to a degree that kills lakes.

In the Commons, his statement emphasized joint action with the United States and the provinces.

Clyne Replies To Williams

The chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today accused a member of the legislature with making an irresponsible allegation against the forest industry giant and its employees in a statement in the house Tuesday.

J. V. Clyne wired Robert Williams (NDP — Vancouver East):

"The statement which you have made in the legislature concerning MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. that it 'deals in privileges with the government' is a contemptible attack on this company and its staff.

"Anyone who would make such a totally unsupported and irresponsible allegation against others under the protection of legislative immunity is a coward and is unfit to be a member of the legislature or to hold any other responsible office.

"If you care to sue me for this statement I will be pleased to give you the name of my solicitor, who has instructions to accept the service of any writ you may issue."

Clyne said the wire was in reply to allegations in the legislature as reported by newspapers.

Small Grant Increases for Many government ... solicits the active support of all business, labor and consumers in the province."

The citizens "and mostly the workers" of the province would lose out unless inflation is brought under control, Bennett said.

His 14 per cent budget increase was less than in the previous year when he topped the billion dollar mark for the first time. It was a 18 per cent increase that enabled Bennett to hit a billion in his "miracle budget" last year.

The increase was 17 per cent in the previous year.

Bennett said the outlook for 1970-71 fiscal year "is indeed favorable" barring "severe disruptions in labor and management relations and world trading conditions."

But he indicated that surplus of $50 million on April 1, 1969 was being held as insurance against a break in the economic picture.

Commenting on the scaling down of revenues and expenditures, the Premier said B.C.'s dependence on foreign export markets means the problem can't be controlled from Victoria.

"Our lack of control of the economic conditions in these markets suggests, and certainly realism indicates, we should not anticipate a continued annual growth in provincial government revenues at the extraordinary rates of recent years."

There was a substantial increase in one area, the net oustanding debt unconditionally guaranteed by the province. It went from $2,094,740,000 as of Dec. 31, 1968, to $2,250,041,000 as of Dec. 31, 1969, a jump of $155,274,000.

"The government's first policy in this new decade is for people, to provide continuing improvement in government services through increased social and economic benefits," the premier told the house.

Bennett cited increased aid as evidence of his government's interest in "a citizens' non-inflationary budget with no tax increases — a dividend of progressive sound government."

I Haven't Renounced Right to Suit: Redel

A senior British Columbia government official, beaten by police in Quebec City last weekend, said today he will reserve his right to take legal action.

Walter Redel, 48, director of the provincial lands branch, was mistaken by two plainclothes policemen for a member of an English-speaking gang trying to steal $1.5 million from a bank.

He was in Quebec to attend a resources conference and was strolling along a street when jumped by the policemen. Redel mistook the policemen for thugs because they were in plain clothes and in an unmarked police car and did not identify themselves other than to say "police," he said.

He was held in jail for three hours. The police took away Redel's clothes and would not permit him to make a phone call.

Redel, beaten with the butt of a police revolver, has stitches over his left eye which is badly swollen, both eyes are black and a stitch closes a gash below his left nostril.

"I want to make this quite clear—I have not renounced my right for suit," he said this morning.

"This will have to wait until my eye is examined and the damage is determined."

Whether or not he sues for damages will depend on the extent of injuries and the reaction B.C. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson gets from Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul.

Redel said the main injury is his left eye where there is a broken bone. This injury has to be properly assessed when the swelling goes down to determine whether an operation is necessary.

"I can see from it but I get double vision in certain directions," he said.

NEVER SAID IT

Redel said some of his comments have been taken to mean he won't take legal action. He emphasized that he has not said he will not file suit.

"If I am not satisfied with the explanation and report from the Quebec attorney-general, certainly I expect to be reimbursed for expenses incurred," he said.

This included an overcoat damaged by cleaners, a hat and certain medical and X-ray expenses which he imagined would be charged to the B.C. medical plan but which he thought should be borne by the Quebec government.

Maurice St. Pierre, Quebec Provincial Police director, says there is no question "at this time" of suspending the two officers involved in the arrest and beating.

"A citizen is not guilty until he is proven guilty," he said in an interview Thursday night.

"Therefore police officers are also innocent until proven otherwise."

But, he added, if the Quebec Police Commission now investigating the incident decides the officers are guilty of misconduct, they will be suspended.

No Headway In Hospital Negotiations

Mediation talks to avert what could be B.C.'s first general hospital strike continued today with little change from the opening session in Vancouver Thursday.

Mediator Ed Sims said he was still optimistic and the two sides were co-operating in an attempt to reach a settlement.

The sides are B.C. Hospitals Association and Local 180 of the Hospital Employees Union, representing 8,500 non-medical personnel in most of the major hospitals of the province.

The staffs, voting in key hospitals, have passed a strike vote by substantial majority.

BUDGET FOR HUMANS

Premier Bennett says 67 per cent of the $1.16 billion budget is for "human betterment" and 21 per cent for "provincial development."

But he gives no indication of new anti-pollution programs beyond an amendment to the municipal sewage treatment act which was revealed but not explained at a press conference.

Bennett lists education, health and social services spending under "human betterment" for a total of $783 million in 1971 compared with $311 million in 1965.

Half a page of the 46-page budget document is devoted to "environmental control." It reviews some measures passed in previous years to aid in pollution control.

It says "added emphasis will be placed on environmental control" and the "emphasis in the 1970s is to be on direct action."

500 Witness Scout Presentations

More than 500 were on hand Thursday to see A. E. (Bert) Yates, 3407 Doncaster, presented with the Silver Acorn, Scouting's award for distinguished service.

The ceremony in the Strathcona Hotel was the most widely attended Scouting dinner to have been held in the area.

Yates, now assistant regional commissioner for Greater Victoria Scouts, has served in many capacities during the past 15 years.

Yates becomes the fifth Victorian to receive Scouting's highest award for leadership at the regional and provincial levels.

Previously honored were: W. H. Gibson, 1969; Donald Hamer, 1964; H. B. Twiss, 1959, and A. B. White, 1956.

A sub-foreman with B.C. Hydro, Yates has one son and two grandsons.

Two nine-year-old Cubs were recognized for bravery. They were Christopher Amos, 930 Grilse, of the 2nd Tsartlip Brentwood Pack, who has received a Bronze Cross for rescuing a girl in Brentwood waters last April; and George Patterson, 496 Strange, of the 6th Camosun Centennial Pack, who has received a letter of commendation for rescuing a girl in the waters off Qualicum last summer.

The Weather and You

by Carl Riblet Jr.

When you went to a drive-in theatre in cool weather — and sometimes it gets quite cold there—you may have noticed that the cars with the most people were the cars with the foggiest windows.

People sweat when they're hot. They don't when they're cool. Then why does a glass of cool water sweat in a warm room when a cup of hot coffee doesn't? The sweat on a glass of ice water is the same as the dew outside in the night air. Dew, which is humidity in the air, always falls first on things that are rapidly losing heat. A coffee cup is something like the hood over an auto engine, the hot contents inside keep the outside warm and dry.

The warmth of the air inside a car with four people is going to make more warmth-and-moisture exchange than the air inside a car with only two passengers, and the windows are bound to get foggier.

Can't Stop Mining In Parks: Kiernan

By BRUCE YEMEN
And VIC PAKSONS

The throne speech debate growled to an end in the legislature Thursday night with a 5½-hour debate on government parks policy which was extended by a bitter exchange between Premier Bennett and Opposition Leader Barrett.

Debate, which ran through the supper hour with only a five-minute break, was on a non-confidence motion proposed by Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) regretting that no legislative safeguards were included in the throne speech to protect provincial parks and other public lands from "arbitrary despoliation."

The non-confidence motion was defeated by a 33 to 16 vote at 8:30 p.m. and the main motion, to adopt the throne speech, was passed by a 33 to 17 vote at 9 p.m. after Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan wound up the two-week old debate.

It was the second night sitting of the week to run through the supper hour on a non-confidence motion. It was the third non-confidence motion of the throne speech debate, the first two being on automobile insurance and hydro power development policies.

Encourage Mining

The government was accused in the debate of not only tolerating but in effect encouraging mining claims in provincial parks and parkland reserves.

Appeals were heard for legislative protection of parks by removal of discretionary cabinet power to change park bundaries.

The power should be handed over to the legislature, the opposition said.

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan defended parks policy as "progressive" and indicated the government will continue to take the view that parkland reserves should be open to mineral claims on the assumption that a park should not be set up in the middle of a rich mining area.

Debate on the motion was already three hours old when Barrett and Bennett tangled just before 6 p.m.

"No deals with the speaker," Barrett suddenly cried, apparently fearing that Bennett was arranging with Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch to wind up the afternoon sitting with Bennett having the floor.

"You're stupid," Bennett told Barrett.

"Caught with your hand in the cookie jar," Barrett said.

'Being Crude'

A bit later, after being called "stupid" several times by Bennett, Barrett said heatedly:

"You're not the king of British Columbia."

"You're stupid," Bennett angrily repeated.

Barrett then said Bennett was being crude.

Shortly after Bennett handed a note to Kiernan, who was speaking, the opposition began charging a government "filibuster".

Kiernan defended parks policy with statistics showing that one new park each month — for a total of 144 — had been created by the province in the past 12 years.

But Opposition Leader Dave Barrett countered with statistics showing that total park acreage had declined almost 2,000,000 acres from 1958 to 1968 from 8.4 million to 6.4 million acres.

That was an average loss of 16,000 acres a month, he said, adding that at that rate the province can't afford too many more of Kiernan's parks.

Kiernan said that as long as he was minister there would continue to be at least one new park each month.

'Gift of Gab'

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) said the minister's willingness to redraw park boundary lines to exclude mining claims was like the action of a "mad cartographer" who can't resist the "mining promoters with the gift of grab."

Macdonald said the way to put teeth into park protection was to allow park boundary changes only after a legislative committee hearing and an act of the legislature.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) suggested a parks commission independent of the government should rule on park changes, and hold public hearings on such matters.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) attacked Kiernan as the man who, as mines minister, allowed mining claims that turned Strathcona Park into an economically viable mining operation.

He also asked who the "power broker" was in the deal last summer in which timber cutting rights in the park were traded to a logging company for a smaller portion of land at Cape Scott.

Defends Swap

Kiernan defended the government's acceptance of $50,000 from Bethlehem Copper Corp. for the right to stake claims in a 36-acre map reserve around Divide Lake (called Quintanton Lake by Kiernan) near Ashcroft.

Kiernan said the lake is in the middle of one of the best copper areas in the province and would be unsuitable for park purposes because it would be surrounded by mining.

He said the existence of parkland reserves is to protect future potential parkland and pointed out there are 2,632 such reserves compared with 276 parks. Not all the reserves are likely to be parks. Kiernan explained, but the government wants them to be first priority for parks if needed.

He admitted that he can't stop a mining company from staking claims in a reserve area but said "we can ask for compensation."

The non-confidence motion was proposed by Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound), following a review of the Cypress Bowl controversy which he cited as an example of the failure to protect public lands.

Williams showed a color photograph of 1964 plans submitted by private developers for the West Vancouver bowl and contrasted it with a black-and-white newspaper photograph showing the scarred mountainside in 1969.

He criticized the province's policy of allowing developers to lease, develop and then purchase property for its failure to require financial quarantees.

Understaffed

He said the department of lands is understaffed and unable to assess adequately plans submitted for development to make sure they are feasible.

Williams said the province should have a new plan for development of Cypress Bowl drawn up and offer it in open bidding to developers. If there are no takers, the government should develop the area itself, he said.

Williams said a government decision in 1968 against building an access road to the bowl at public expense turned the developers into "a cut-and-run group" with the result that excessive logging went on, ostensibly to clear land for ski hills and other facilities.

Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay), seconding the non-confidence motion, said the government "had proved itself a champion in desecrating our land.

"We need a more definite program of land use in the province," he added.

Fire Hall Bylaw Set in Maple Bay

NORTH COWICHAN — Residents of Maple Bay fire district will be asked to approve a $30,000 bylaw for the construction of a new firehall if they can pore the full amount to $50,000, North Cowichan council decided Wednesday.

Ald. Tom Burge, chairman of Ald. Tom Burge, hairma nof the fire committee, reported on a meeting of the fire department at Maple Bay on Tuesday night.

He said sketch plans acquired by the department for a new Maple Bay fire building projected a cost of $65,000 plus 7 per cent for architectural and supervisory fees.

After consideration, it had been agreed that the plans could be cut to a total of $50,000 — including the fees — and the municipality would be asked to come up with $20,000 of the cost.

Burge said the meeting also raised the question of the inevitability of forming a central fire alarm system for all of North Cowichan.

He said the present system, which relies on telephone calls from a variety of volunteer and police sources from Maple Bay to Chemainus, was "relatively inefficient and costly."

A meeting will be held tonight in the South End fire hall between fire chiefs and the RCMP to discuss the matter.

From Back to Front

THE ESSENCE OF EFFECTIVE urban renewal and improvement is self-help. Victoria is fortunate in having a downtown business core which responds in general to the need for group action, particularly so in the case of the organized merchants of the 700-Block, Yates Street. These property owners and businessmen, sparked for many years by Mr. Tom Denny, and currently headed by Mr. Jack Lacterman, have provided an excellent example of what can be accomplished through enthusiastic leadership and joint action. The city has benefited greatly by improvement plans carried out so far, made possible by the co-operation of city authorities.

Now further phases of beautification are on the drawing board, as revealed at a meeting in city hall this week, and the city council should give the 700-Block organization every encouragement in their efforts to make the city centre a more attractive place. We already have parking facilities for which the decreasing deficits of the initial years have been paid by a levy on the nearby business firms, an attractive little mall off View Street, the Yates Street sidewalk canopies, and a general clean-up of signs and building facades.

The latest plans, however, will add a whole new dimension to the concept, for they will create an intimate shopping and leisure mall in the present back-alley space between Yates and Johnson, with access to the adjacent streets. It will bring widened sidewalks to Yates Street, with trees, planters and street furniture. It will involve an inter-connection with improvements on Johnson Street and could ultimately lead to a complete pedestrian way through the blocks from Fort Street to Pandora — a valuable asset which the original city planners overlooked.

An important factor in the Yates Street program is the 400-place civic parking facility planned for Johnson Street, and city council should make clear its support for the project. It will be needed not only for the inter-block development but for the concentration of traffic which the new construction at Douglas and Johnson will bring.

The projected improvement will be largely financed by the neighborhood property owners themselves if agreement is reached — an admirable example of co-ordinated self-help. The downtown improvement program is, of course, prompted by the need to attract pedestrians — and potential customers — to the area. Making the environment attractive and convenient is the prior requirement, and what has been done in some other cities on this continent is a revelation of what ingenuity, imagination and confidence can accomplish.

Compared with some of the plazas, courts, malls and planted areas which have been created elsewhere, Victoria's projects may appear modest indeed. But the present program will be an inspiring step forward to a better, more livable city. It deserves all the support required.

Police Brutality in Quebec

THE BEATING WHICH B.C. Lands Director Walter Redel suffered at the hands of Quebec City detectives last Sunday when he was mistakenly arrested as a suspect in an attempted hold-up is a deplorable example of that over-used phrase "police brutality." Walking along Lower Town's waterfront, Mr. Redel was apprehended by two men —one wearing a ski jacket, the other a turtleneck sweater — who claimed they were "police." Fearing for his life, Mr. Redel resisted. He says he was hit repeatedly about the face and at least once with a pistol butt. Not until after he was wrestled into a waiting car was a badge produced by one of the men.

Canada is relatively free of this over-reaction by policemen. But it does occasionally occur and evidence of this is indicated in Justice Minister Turner's promise of law reform that would give more protection to accused persons. An example was seen last May in Vancouver when Chief Justice H. W. Davey told four city police officers that their actions in stopping a car full of young men and arresting one of them was "excessive and unwarranted." The court was told that one of the men in the car was choked, hit in the face and kneed several times in the groin. Charges of dangerous driving and obstructing police resulted in acquittal for the accused.

Quebec Premier Jean Bertrand is reportedly considering a formal apology to British Columbia and his justice minister, Remi Paul, has indicated he is ready to submit Mr. Redel's case to the Quebec police commission for investigation. This indicates that justice will be done. Mr. Redel, with admirable forbearance, has said he is not bitter about the incident; the rest of the country should follow his example.

The Boeing 707 Purchase

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER is the only adage that can be applied to the government's decision to purchase four Boeing 707 jet transports to replace twelve aging Yukon turbo-prop planes. The 707s will give Canada's Air Transport Command much needed flexibility in speed and range—important characteristics for a nation with overseas commitments.

But the decision for new long-range military transports is long overdue. The Boeing 707 prototype that first flew on July 15, 1954, was the first jet transport to be completed and flown in the United States. Canada's Yukon, our adaptation of the Bristol Britannia, was first delivered to the Royal Canadian Air Force in June, 1961.

It could not have been that the Boeing 707 was not available in 1961. At that time the United States Air Force and at least 15 commercial airlines around the world were flying the Boeing plane. The obvious question that will occur to Canadian taxpayers who will ultimately foot the $55,900,000 bill for the planes is why the government did not order the Boeing back in 1961 and save the considerable cost of 12 "stop-gap" aircraft.

That decision was made during the Diefenbaker era, however, and no amount of hindsight now can undo it. The Boeing 707 has proved itself an outstanding aircraft. To date more than 800 have been built for military and commercial purposes. But other than speed and range the 707 does not have many advantages over the old Yukon. According to Jane's All the World's Aircraft, the Boeing 707 in its most advanced model has a maximum payload of 56,900 pounds compared with a maximum of 66,048 pounds for the Yukon. Even taking into account the Boeing's high speed (550 miles per hour cruising speed compared with 386 miles per hour for the Yukon) it is difficult to understand how only four Boeings will replace 12 Yukons in actual utilization.

There are many other feasibility factors that the government has probably considered in making its choice, not the least of which is Boeing's plan to construct a multi-million dollar plant in Winnipeg. The plant's Canadian location will facilitate servicing the Canadian Boeings. But it is of more than passing interest that the announcement to buy the 707s came after Boeing had committed itself to the Winnipeg expansion.

". . . Oh, Miss . . . will you grab a dictionary and look up the word 'apology' for me . . . ?"

Industry on Arrowsmith

Again it seems that in the Mt. Arrowsmith region industry is rearing its ugly head in its belief in a dominance over nature.

Mt. Arrowsmith is already developed as a prime recreational area with well-constructed trails and also the Rosseau Chalet available for anyone's use.

This region is within easy driving distance of all the major urban areas of Vancouver Island and also is the nearest area with an excellent array of alpine flora and fauna.

Logging has already left its marks. However it is not 'til the spring that major logging will begin.

We, the University of Victoria OutDoors Club urge all conservation groups and individuals to circulate petitions and write to MacMillan, Bloedel Ltd., Pacific Logging Co. and B.C. Forest Products, the developers of this region.

When will we learn that our natural resources are not to be misused, and these areas of beauty must be preserved in their natural state. — Peter van Leusden, University of Victoria OutDoors Club.

CANADA OF THE FUTURE

Points Overlooked in the 'New Nationalism'

Hutchison

MACLEAN'S magazine announces, in large, emphatic headlines that it "wants to fan the flames of what we take to be the Heartening Surge of a New Canadian Nationalism." In support of this conflagration Peter Newman, editor of the Toronto Star, predicts (quite safely) that "by the end of the decade it will be difficult to be a Canadian and not a nationalist." These horrendous warnings evidently are supposed to inspire us for the grim struggle ahead. But before we start it might be useful to understand what we are struggling about.

In the first place, we are not struggling about anything new, as Maclean's seems to imagine. Nationalism is at least 100 years old and there would be no Canadian nation without it. Macdonald and his colleagues were fanning those flames, and using them to weld a transcontinental state, long before Maclean's was born. The new factor in the ancient native equation is not the nationalism of Canadians, which has grown stronger than ever, but the increasingly strong internationalism of the world around them.

Macdonald built the nation when all nations claimed total sovereignty and on that claim fought the first of two world wars only 47 years after our Confederation. The cost of such unlimited sovereignty was rather high and we have not paid it all yet. Modern statesmen, including Pierre Trudeau, judge from this experience that the nation states must rethink their methods on a shrunken, polluted and dangerous planet or finally destroy its human inhabitants in a third war.

Driven Together

These men have realized that, apart from the human desire to survive, the nations are being driven together, willy-nilly, by economic interdependence, technological inventions, sheer necessity and common sense. Thus nationalism, in its old terms, is not only obsolete, but, armed with the ultimate weapons of destruction, is insane.

One assumes that the editors of Maclean's, who are sane, would not dispute the most obvious facts of our time. But if the old nationalism must die to avoid the death of civilization, what does the new Canadian nationalism involve and where does it lead?

So far, it has led mostly to confusion and, in particular, hatred of our immediate neighbors. Thus we find some excited Canadian journalists rushing back from Washington to report that the American Republic is falling to pieces, as if this joyful news somehow ensured the unity and safety of Canada. We find statesmen like T. C. Douglas writhing in an ecstasy of nationalism and a flood of crocodile tears, whenever the United States is in trouble, as if we could escape the consequences.

The Canadian people, I think, are more sensible than the prophets who speak in their name to foreigners. The Americans, fortunately, are too busy at the moment to listen. Nevertheless, the doctrine of nationalism, in its proper terms, is not only desirable but essential if Canada is to last and be useful to its own people or the world. The half-built, fragile wall of the new internationalism needs sound individual bricks and thriving nations, just as a community needs sound individual citizens.

No one has to apologize for being a Canadian, but it is not easy to be a good Canadian and simultaneously a good world citizen. That double role confronts us with some subtle choices. We must contrive a synthesis between our love of this uniquely fortunate land, our obligations to other lands less fortunate, our debts to friends who protect us and our duty to Canadians yet unborn.

Nationalism, in short, can be positive or negative. It can build a great nation justified by its achievements at home and its behavior abroad. Or it can build a mean nation unjustified by its mere wealth (if, indeed, it can be even wealthy lacking the help, money and ideas of foreigners).

Mr. Trudeau, for instance, is an ardent nationalist and the efforts of his enemies, the negative nationalists, to picture him as something else is comical. They lack, among other things, a sense of humor. Yet Mr. Trudeau, for all his mistakes, has not made the final mistake of supposing that Canada's major problems reside outside its borders, that everything would be fine and dandy if the foreigners would leave us alone.

First—Our Own Affairs

He knows, as all but a few Canadians know, that our first job is to manage our own affairs before we tell foreigners how to manage theirs. And he knows, too, that we are not doing very well.

Like any prime minister, Mr. Trudeau, despite his gaudy plumage, is a bird of brief flight and his government a minor episode in the nation's history. Canadian nationalism, in constructive or destructive terms, will long outlast our present rulers as it outlasted the pioneer nationalists. When Mr. Newman says that it will be difficult to be a Canadian without being a nationalist he utters, in sudden revelation, the primary law of our life from the beginning.

It won't hurt Canadians to remember the law, but Mr. Newman and Maclean's have not told us how the old nationalism is to be fitted into the new world of total interdependence. They state the negative, familiar to us all, not the positive of our future, if we are to have a future. Left there, the argument leads to the distrust of foreigners, to impossible isolation and a mean society, poor even by economic measurement.

Doubtless the new nationalists do not intend to leave the argument there. They must have something better to propose than a futile, losing war of nerves on our neighbors while demanding their money and protection. If so, let us hear what the new nationalism really means, not in screams and slogans, but in policies.

If it means only high tariffs, restrictions on capital, brakes on the flow of ideas and sermons on morality from Ottawa, then nationalism is not new at all. It is an attempt to return to the womb and the same attempt, in many states more powerful than Canada, is perhaps the most dangerous current threat to mankind. In any case, it won't work and in Canada's case it is nothing but an inferiority complex dressed to look like idealism. It won't work because the earth mother who bore our species has retired from maternity and left us to fend for ourselves.

Mr. Chretien Blurs the Eskimo Position

Western

IN a reply to a series of questions from John Diefenbaker and other members recently, Jean Chretien used some rather odd language in respect to the Eskimos of the Ungava region in Northern Quebec. At one point the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development said: "A few years ago, we concluded an agreement to the effect that no change of jurisdiction would take place unless the Eskimos participated in the discussions."

Later, reporting on a visit to the villages, he told the House: "I heard the grievances of those citizens and I assured them there would be no jurisdictional transfer unless the protection of their language and religion was guaranteed."

He said "It is not an agreement, nor is it an agreement to agree. It does constitute a statement outlining a consensus with respect to certain basic principles and conditions which, in the event of agreement, are common to the two governments."

As it turned out, Quebec's notion of the consensus and principles was far removed from that of Mr. Laing.

Much stranger, however — since Mr. Chretien is a lawyer — are the references to "change of jurisdiction" and "jurisdictional transfer". No such change or transfer was ever contemplated except by Quebec City.

There could not be a "jurisdictional transfer" regardless of the conditions, without formal amendment of the British North America Act. While Eskimos are not specifically mentioned in the constitution, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled in 1939 that, in law, the Eskimos are Indians and as such are under exclusive federal jurisdiction (Section 91, 24). In so finding, the court ironically upheld what was then the Quebec contention.

The most reasonable interpretation of Mr. Chretien's remarks is that he was somewhat careless in his choice of words. For certainly Parliament has never been advised that the government is seeking a constitutional amendment of this sort.

Amendment Difficult

It might, in fact, be extremely difficult to secure any specific amendment at a time when the whole constitution is being discussed and when the provinces, presumably, would be reluctant to commit themselves on particular changes until they have before them an entire package.

It seems much more likely that Mr. Chretien is, on the contrary, pursuing the policy inherited from Mr. Laing and merely endeavoring to carry it one stage further. In that case, however, it would be much wiser to give the House a full statement with specific assurance that there has been no dilution of the principles to which Mr. Laing was so strongly committed.

From this standpoint, Mr. Chretien's off-the-cuff replies were less than satisfactory. Mr. Diefenbaker's opening question about the Ungava Eskimos referred specifically to "their right to the language of their choice in the schools."

In answer, Mr. Chretien said: "The first condition we make, with regard to any transfer, is that the people who live in the new Quebec territories be free to worship as they please and to speak the language of their choice."

The point is, however, that a person may have the right to worship as he pleases or to speak the language he pleases without necessarily having the right to send his children to a school in which instruction is in the language of his choice. This, presumably, is the matter of concern since English has long been the second language of Ungava people, as it is of their kinsmen in the North-West Territories.

With the development of Arctic Quebec, a knowledge of French would doubtless be to the advantage of the native people and there is no reason why French should not also be offered in schools of the region. But the choice should lie with those primarily affected. The Eskimo, after all, has handicaps enough without being required to attain the ultimate in B and B perfection in a single generation.

The controversy of the middle 1960s turned on the meaning of consultation. For Rene Levesque, spokesman for the Quebec government at the time, it signified nothing beyond face-saving formalities. There was great pressure on Mr. Laing to accommodate himself to this viewpoint.

Far from yielding to it, he took a very strong position on the issue and never swerved from it.

Thus, in a statement of July 9, 1965, Mr. Laing spoke of a gradual extension of provincial services "subject always to full consultation and in accordance with the wishes of the Eskimos concerned." He also said: "The opinions of the Eskimos are of paramount importance. This is a matter of fundamental human justice. The Eskimo community will progress far more rapidly and maintain its own culture and dignity more completely if it has entire confidence in the government's and other groups with whom they associate."

Not Explicit

It may well be that this is also Mr. Chretien's position. But the words he used were not so explicit. He spoke for example, of "no change" . . . "unless the Eskimos participated in the discussions." He said that two officials were going to the region and he mentioned invitations to Eskimos to attend meetings in Quebec City.

Discussions are admirable. But after the discussions, what? Whose opinions are paramount? Mr. Chretien has not made himself clear, Mr. Laing was explicit.

What is needed is a simple, categorical assurance that policy has not changed.

This is probably the case, but the minister should make himself clear before further doubts and misunderstandings arise. Mr. Chretien has had problems enough of this nature with Indian policy; it would be wholly unfortunate if new difficulties developed in Ungava from a failure, affecting the Eskimos, to make policy explicit.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"MAY I PLEASE SPEAK TO HERBERT GOODFELLOW, JUNIOR?" "HI'YA, MUSHFACE!"

Looking Back

From the Times of Feb. 6, 1910.

At Monday evening's meeting of the City Council Mayor Morley will present what is perhaps the most important resolution considered by any civic body in the recent history of Victoria — one recommending the exemption of improvements from taxation in levying the rate for the year 1910, under section 139 of the Municipal Clauses Act. If the change is adopted it will be unprofitable to hold vacant lots and other land in the city.

The Arms Salesmen Work Closely With Hypocritical Governments

By MAURICE EDELMAN
New Statesman

(Mr. Edelman is a British Labor MP)

Like brothel keeping, arms-exporting is tidier, better supervised, and in some ways more hygienic when it operates under government licence.

The fancy names — the U.S. Office of International Logistic Negotiations, the British Office of Defence Sales, and the French Commission Interministerielle pour l'Etude des Exportations de Materiel de Guerre, for example — give an added sense of respectability to the government establishments.

The rationale is also similar: 'There will always be war (commercial sex); therefore the organized sale of arms to deserving cases (the therapy of controlled indulgence) is better than a free-for-all. Besides, there is a big market (arms and girls are good business), and while we affirm the highest moral principles, if someone is going to benefit from the demand, why not us?'

In this market, the natural customers are the countries of the developing world; and although (to end my analogy), this might seem to come under the heading of detournement de mineurs, it is the young states, oil-rich, lusty and revolutionary, whom the arms salesmen encourage to be their eager clients.

French government spokesmen, backing their arms industry, whose shares have risen spectacularly on the Bourse in recent months, rightly accuse France's moralising rivals of hypocrisy when they condemn the Mirage salesmen for moving in so quickly after the expulsion of certain British and U.S. interests from Libya.

But hypocrisy, 'the tribute paid by virture to vice', has many other applications. A squadron of 30 Mirages needs a minimum of 300 experts for their maintenance, and an elaborate infrastructure of radar and supply. At present, the Libyan air force has a few Lockheed T-33 trainers, a U.S. Dakota delivered in 1963, and three Caravelles.

Business First

Whatever France's professed reasons for injecting the Mirages into the dangerous Middle East—Libya today, Iraq tomorrow — her immediate interest is to do business for French industry.

Indeed, the general theory of arms salesmanship could not have been put more bluntly than it was by (British defence minister) Denis Healey in January 1966:

"While the government attaches the highest importance to making progress in the field of arms control and disarmament, we must also take what practical steps we can to ensure that this country does not fail to secure its rightful share of this valuable commercial market."

So there we have the Doctrine of Maximum Arms Sales. The present British Head of defence Sales, the former sales director of British Leyland, has added a gloss. 'For a good salesman,' he has said, 'the product doesn't really matter. He can just as easily sell a house or a church.'

But it would be unfair to suggest that the British government is merely concerned in improving the balance of trade by selling arms, now at the rate of £150 million a year. The sixth report of the Estimates Committee 1967-68 includes as an Appendix 14 a joint memorandum by the Ministry of Technology and the Ministry of Defence on the Promotion of Exports and Defence Equipment. This memorandum, in explaining why the government appointed its first Head of Defence Sales, says:

'Strengthen Links'

"The sale of British military equipment abroad may not only strengthen military and political links, but also by increasing the sale of production help to reduce the cost of equipping, both to the British forces and those of our friends and allies. Exports of military equipment also make an important contribution to United Kindom foreign currency earnings."

The memorandum later says that a system of licensing, operated by officials of various ministries and if necessary ministers, exists to ensure that the most careful consideration is given to all 'the political, strategic and economic factors involved in any proposal to sell arms'.

The intention is reasonable. On dramatic issues like the sale of arms to South Africa, which became the subject of public debate, the policy works.

But in Britain as in France, Belgium, the U.S. and the USSR, the military-industrial complex, as Eisenhower called it, is hard at work. It is pervasive but it burrows in secrecy. Try and get a detached reply in Parliament about the sale of weapons, and you will see what I mean. The minister very properly refuses to give answers which might give an advantage to an enemy.

But the intimacy between the war-industry establishment (which includes most of the metal-working industries) and the government departments means that more and more boardroom and Whitehall decisions are shrouded from Parliament and public till their final disclosure as a fait accompli.

The arms salesman, supported, as the memorandum states, by the sales promotion staffs of the Navy and Army Departments, travel far and wide to drum up business. The embassies at Washington, Bonn, and Paris have Counsellors (Defence Supply), and other embassies Service attaches to help them along.

Yet however wise Whitehall or Pentagon or Quai d'Orsay officials may be, their political judgment is often as faulty as that of their so-called masters.

A sale of arms is a political pledge. Is British foreign policy to be made on the basis of an initiative by an industrial-military complex, reinforced by officials, which becomes a commitment well before Parliament can debate it?

The Vietnam war is the classic case of an executive decision which was given an almost irreversible momentum by industry; long before the issue could be debated objectively, vast areas of U.S. investment and 3 million workers and their representatives had an inextricable involvement in a prolonged war.

Strange Courses

The ability to offer the right goods at the right price at the right time is essential if sales of equipment are to be achieved,' runs the memorandum. I don't think it unfair to paraphrase that sentence as, "the greater the chance of war, the better business will be, especially if you get in first."

But arms business being arms business, the weapons move in strange courses, even in times of peace, when their buyers have done with them and want to get this year's model.

Thus West Germany, which had to buy $750 million of U.S. military equipment yearly to offset the cost of U.S. forces, has been selling off its surplus, some of it pretty deadly, "at the right price, at the right time," and so on, to Israel, Venezuela and via Iran to Pakistan.

Arms have a long life; in the Cyprus dispute of 1963-65, the Turkish Cypriots were armed with Mauser bolt-action rifles bought by the Turks from the Germans between 1890 and 1905. Perhaps they still are.

I can well believe that second-hand Luftwaffe F-86 jets and British Hunters will be happily doing their thing in South America until well into the 1970s.

With our eyes on nuclear weapons, we lost sight till the Six Day War and the Nigerian civil war of what conventional wars of increasing, though non-nuclear, sophistication can do.

Now that the arms manufacturers have seen the excellent business that can be done in traditional trade under the nuclear umbrella, their salesmen, with their governments' blessing and licence, are stepping up their efforts.

Devious Nudges

There have been and will be many rationalizations by politicians about the accelerating trade in arms, ranging from brazen logic-chopping to the devious winks and nudges by which it's suggested in France that the Libyan Mirages, though sold, may never be delivered.

In Britain, an undertaking to supply weapons should be a considered responsibility within the sphere of Parliament's interest, and once given it should not lightly be withdrawn.

The urgent question is: "How can we cope with the danger of the new competition in conventional arms?"

The argument is that if "we don't sell arms to the Third World, the 'others' (chiefly the Soviet bloc) will. It is in fact an argument for a desperate anarchy.

What can be done, however, is for the seven countries of the Western Union to combine in formulating a policy of harmonised restraint in arms sales, in a self-denying pledge not to open up new markets in the underdeveloped world, and in attempting to organize with the Soviet Union a SALT conference limited to the sale of arms to third powers.

'Levers of Pleasure' Soon Available to All

KAHN

By VICTOR COHN

By the year 2000, Herman Kahn told the U.S. House of Representatives science committee, "we'll be able to wear consoles on our chests with levers for all our pleasures." The levers, through wires to the brain, would trigger various enjoyable responses, sexual and otherwise.

"You'll have a console with 10 levers," predicted Kahn, controversial theorist on man and technology. "But I don't think you should play your own console. That's depraved.

"It might be done between any two consenting adults. Just imagine all the possible combinations. As, 'have you ever tried 10 and five together?' Or, 'how about one and one?' "

That—or "something like it," he forecast—will be one result of research now being done to find pleasure centres in the brains of man and animals and use electricity to trigger them.

★

That, he also emphasized, is just one example of "how it's gong to be in the next 30 years," how science and technology will lead to change, good and bad.

Among his other forecasts: Computers that will out-think and perhaps rule man; Further collapse of traditional values; a mid-1980s technological crisis, but an absence of devastating world wars.

Kahn, 47 and roly-poly, is director of the Hudson Institute at Croydon, N.Y., a prime "think tank" for the defense department and other customers. A controversial physicist-mathematician-weapons theorist, he favors anti-ballistic missiles and a little nuclear warfare, if necessary to save us.

Admirers have called him "the von Clausewitz of the nuclear age." Detractors consider him a Dr. Strangehawk. No one denies his brilliance.

He has recently been applying this brilliance to studying present political, social and technological trends and trying to see into the future.

The house science and astronautics committee convened its annual panel last week to consider future problems. Its subject this year is "the converging technologies of communications, computers and automation." In other words, what will all the new machines do to and for us?

Thinking about this, Kahn preached, is vital if man would survive it. So he solemnly predicted:

- Computers improved 100 billion to 100 trillion times "to transcend man" in thinking, painting, writing poetry and every way—"sex too," by reproducing and improving themselves.
- Computers taking over the teaching of children, and even speaking in ever-patient, ever-friendly voices. "So far as I know there's no cultural problem about kids coming to a computer. They like it."
- In the 21st century, perhaps, "Like computers taking over—that too I find not completely implausible."
- "A learning society" in which all, young and old, will have to get new educations every four years to keep up.
- "A post-industrial society" in the U.S. and other advanced countries—with most of the labor force not in "extractive labor" like agriculture or mining, as in undeveloped countries; and not even in industry, as in presently industrialized countries; but in services, a new condition in history.
- Continued erosion of "traditional societal levers," like the virtue of earning a living, among the young of the United States and some other countries.
- The rise of Japan—where society, despite change, still passionately values hard work and tradition—as perhaps the world's pre-eminent nation. "In the 1950s, the Japanese economy more than doubled. In the '60s, it increased by a factor of three, which is incredible! In the '70s it may increase by a factor of four or five!"

★

- A "coming 1985 technological crisis," because of increased population, pollution, ever more dangerous weapons and many dangerous new human choices, like electrical satisfaction and genetic engineering.
- Still, lack of great conflicts like World Wars I and II. "I believe we're in for a period of relative calm, like 1815-1914. For the first time in the 20th century, I think, you can go out and buy a map and it should still be pretty accurate at the end of the century."

But much of the future—the very future he outlined—Kahn found sadly "depressing."

His solutions? "I have a three-year program for dreaming up solutions, and this is the first year. I expect to be back in a year or two with prescriptions. One, I can see, may have to be reaffirmation of some traditional values on a respectable intellectual level."

Saigon Jails Anti-War Song Writer

By MARK FRANKLAND

SAIGON — A Vietnamese student who composes anti-war songs has been jailed by the Saigon government, apparently in order to discourage other young South Vietnamese from openly expressing their unhappiness about the war.

The composer, Phan Van Thang, a 24-year-old student at the Van Hanh Buddhist university, has been sentenced to five years' hard labor by a mobile military field court.

He was found guilty under a law, issued in 1965 by the then ruling military junta, which makes punishable any act "demoralizing the army and the people in the anti-communist struggle." The prosecutor made no attempt to show that Thang had any connection with the Viet Cong.

Anti-war songs have been popular with young Vietnamese for the past three or four years. They are sung, or played on tape, at student gatherings and in dozens of small cafes in Saigon and other large towns.

The government has already tried to check the taste for this music. A year ago it banned some songs by Trinh Cong Son, by far the most successful of Saigon's young composer-poets. But Son appeals to the critically minded young while staying on the right side of authority. He is even said to have patrons among senior army officers.

▣

The Saigon student's union published a small collection of Thang's songs as long ago as 1967. By waiting until now to punish him so harshly, the government has disclosed an evident fear of growing discontent among the young intellegentsia over the replacement of American by Vietnamese troops—may well increase this resentment. Some young Vietnamese are easily persuaded that Washington is bent on getting Saigon to fight America's war for her.

The government's worry is all the greater because it recruits almost all its junior officers from the relatively small class of young Vietnamese with a high school or university education — precisely the audience that song writers are addressing.

In one of the songs cited in court — "The Bullet" — Thang attacks the Americans for arming South Vietnam. "The Vietnamese people need rice and clothes," the song goes, "and our faithful allies give us great aid — gold colored bullets."

In another song, called "Lullaby," Thang has a mother singing this to her baby: "When you are big you will carry a rifle and sword, sleep, sleep. When you are big you will kill your brothers."

What Price Freedom?

By JOHN GELLNER

Recently, during a panel discussion which somehow got sidetracked to the subject of the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia and the absence of armed resistance on the part of the Czechs and Slovaks, the age-old question was asked: What price freedom? Would a man still consider freedom worth dying for?

This is a pertinent question, because the area of the world in which the individual is free—in the sense that he can be the master of his destiny—is getting progressively smaller.

More and more countries are falling under dictatorial rule. Their people are not made to suffer all the time, of course, and some do not suffer at all.

●

What makes life in a dictatorship so difficult to bear, especially for somebody who has once lived in freedom, is the ever-present sense of helplessness against the machinery of a state which operates with some internal balances but without any outside checks.

Some of our young people say that is no different from what we have here, where man's freedom supposedly is crushed under the juggernaut of the System, or the Establishment, or Corporate Organization, or whatever they call the order of things in a modern industrialized democracy.

This is nonsense. The safeguards against suppression of individual rights—and of individuality—are available. Nobody needs to give in. These safeguards are absent in non-democratic countries.

The reports from these countries of purges and liquidations and arbitrary imprisonment make the headlines, but almost equally sad and perhaps more typical are the lesser tragedies.

●

Recently I heard of a man in Czechoslovakia who is the bearer of a name ancient and famous in Czech history. He used to be a landowner. They took his property, chased him and his family from their home.

Then he found a job as cashier in a circus. It was a living. He did not complain. One day a Party official ordered his dismissal because he was not of proletarian origin. He became a hod carrier. If he is lucky they'll leave him in peace. The trouble is, he won't know if they will, ever.

When, in the discussion, it was my turn to state my position, I said I was too old to want to live in any other manner than a free man. If I had no choice but to submit to tyranny or to resist, I would likely opt to "die in splendor." If I were 20, though, I might think differently — who knows?

One can only hope that our young people will never have to make this choice. They are—or say they are—non-violent, except for the occasional angry outburst, which is not very risky because our guardians of law and order are themselves under the rule of law. Our youth abhor—or say they do—military force.

●

With such a creed they may not be able, should it ever come to it, to stand up to the disciplined hosts of some dictatorship. Then they will have to make the decision the Czechs and Slovaks had to make on Aug. 21, 1968. Unfree or dead. Neither prospect will be attractive.

In the end, it does come down to the question so many people in the world already have had to ask themselves in a concrete situation: What price freedom?

Letter from a Dead Body

By RICHARD NEEDHAM

I remarked the other day that I keep encountering a problem which I think is unique to our era; the teen-ager (usually a boy) who is what I call a dead body—"withdrawn, silent, apathetic, cynical, indifferent, taking no interest in anything, a lost soul." This has brought me a remarkable letter from an Ottawa high school student.

Dear Mr. Needham: I feel I must lay claim to being one of the "dead bodies" mentioned in your column today. I am 14, in Grade 11, the highest marks in the school, liked by everyone, a great future, etc., but I couldn't really care less if I was killed today.

★ ★ ★

I can see that the typical interests of teen-agers — cars, girls, clothes, etc. — are really just idle pastimes and the kids are interested because everyone else is, and it would be weird not to be interested. Every day in our school, which is about the most depressing, anti-educational institution anywhere, I see the kids each trying so desperately to raise himself in the eyes of the others, each recounting his own exploits with vast exaggeration and cliches.

Here I must agree with that article in Harper's (October, 1969) by John W. Aldridge. None of us are really individuals. We are only empty shells filled with the products of a vast industrialized civilization. He mentions a paradox between our "collective vociferousness and individual inarticulateness" which is quite right, the reason being that in a group teen-agers will always try to outdo one another in carrying the accepted ideal forward. That is, whether they understand, agree with, or sympathize with this ideal or not, they will violently defend and promote it because everyone else is.

This is natural and instinctive but when combined with other factors it becomes one of the prime factors destroying indivuduality, and it is the realization of this loss which is one of the causes for apathy, cynicism and general disenchantment with life. Another factor which leads to this loss is another which Aldridge mentions — the fact that kids today are never alone to develop their own ideas and viewpoints. Always there are friends, the radio, the television, etc., and therefore as no individual attitudes are developed it is all the more easy to accept the general ideas and attitudes.

A third factor in destroying individuality is the schools. The present view held by the majority of students of what's "in" is the idea, "School is boring therefore knowledge is boring, so therefore I will not learn anything and will try and flout the school's authority. Also in many city schools physical training has been de-emphasized. This then has closed two roads to individuality by stopping two of the most fundamental ways by which a student could become an individual in the eyes of his friends.

Another thing besides loss of individuality which causes apathy and cynicism is lack of purpose or lack of goal. I think that the attitude 'There are lots of people in the world — it'll keep running so what does it matter if one person like me doesn't do anything?' is becoming too prevalent. It is not that young people are afraid to work, it is that knowing that they are merely average (through performance at school or other places) they cannot change the world and seeing it as it is today they have no real desire to participate in it.

This lack of purpose has become particularly pronounced since man's fight for physical survival has ended. In the past people always had physical or material goals to attain but now these have gone — we have always had everything we needed and therefore have another reason for living removed. (This was not really a reason but rather an occupation which kept people busy and left them with little room for philosophical doubt).

Tied in with this is the present impossibility of applying the theme in Candide as told by the old man — that there is no point in worrying about the purpose of life and that the only way to make life bearable is to work. Work in this sense was to support yourself completely, i.e. not to have to depend on anyone else. Nowadays this is impossible and a 9-to-5 office job does not yield the satisfaction.

Teen-agers see this and also find that there is nothing for them to work at. Before there was always work on the farm but now this is gone and there is too much spare time. This leads to boredom and continual boredom leads to depression and apathy. This is part and only part of the problem which must be vast and complex.

The solution too is undoubtedly complex. But, there is one underlying desire I think most teen-agers have. It is to break away from this routine drudgery and get out and see the world themselves. To stop being treated like children and to travel — all over. That is the only real light in my life and it is my hope that someday before I get my 9-to-5 office job I may see the world.

I think I should retract my rather abrupt statement at the beginning about not caring whether I was killed or not. Writing this letter has sufficiently raised my spirits that I think I'll see what tomorrow has to offer. Yours sincerely, Robert Gaizauskas.

OLDER HOMES ALSO QUALIFY

Aid to persons buying older homes will be provided for one year only, Premier Bennett said today.

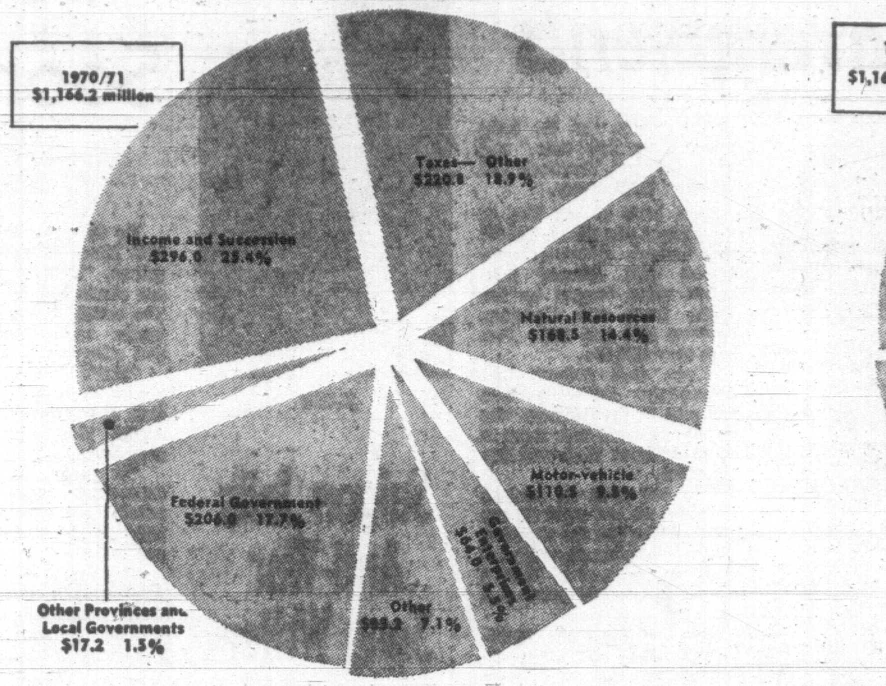
The provincial budget offers tenants of two-years' residence in the province either a $500 home acquisition grant or a $2,500 second mortgage to purchase an existing home.

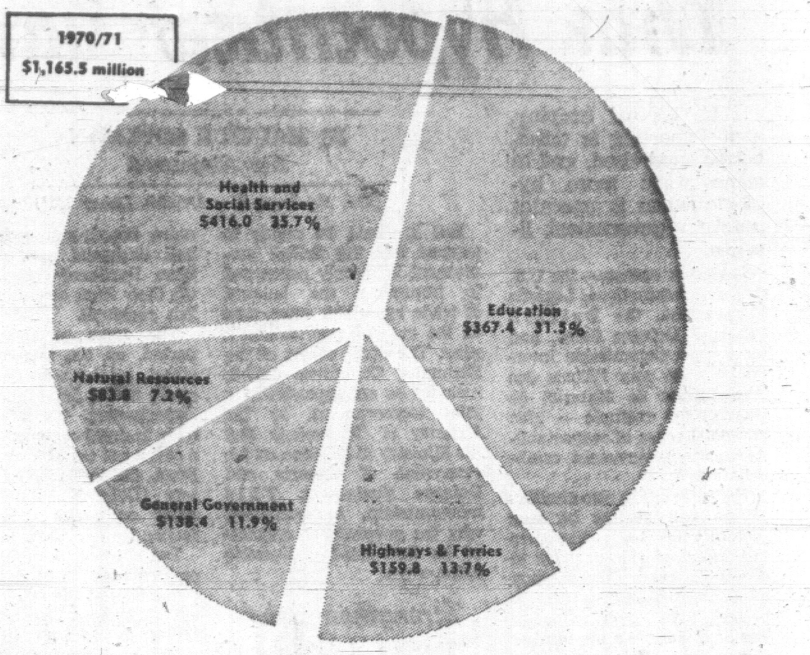
"As this is a measure of assistance during these particularly trying financial times, it will be effective for a one-year period only but may be reviewed from time to time," Bennett said in the budget speech.

He also announced a $10 increase in the annual homeowner grant to $160 maximum. It was increased $20 last year.

In addition, $25 million will be added to the Provincial Home Acquisition Grant Fund.

Pies Show Where It Comes from, Where It Goes





Cities to Get More Money

Total assistance to local governments from the provincial government will reach about $653 million.

The budget includes an increase of $79 million over the amount designated to help the municipalities and regional districts last year.

Included in the aid is a $2 increase in the per capita grant to local governments, raising it from $28 to $30. Last fiscal year the per capita increase was raised by $3.

FOR WELFARE

Bennett said the increase in the per capita grant will be recommended to cover the municipalities share of the increased cost of welfare allowances.

The budget breaks down amounts granted to the local governments into several headings including:

General and education grants, hospital care, social assistance to municipal residents, highways, and into general categories including pollution, policing, parks, ambulance service, transportation subsidy, water control and conservation, and development and construction of housing projects.

The municipal affairs department will receive in increase in the fiscal year of nearly $4 million to bring its estimated expenditures to almost $60 million.

$306.95 PER CAPITA

The premier said the assistance to the local governments it now $306.95 per capita.

Estimated provincial homeowner grants, applicable to non-school municipal levies were set at $5.3 million.

Tables included with the speech indicate general and education grants to local governments will total $268 million; hospital care grants will be $175 million; social assistance to municipal residents will be $122 million; and highways will be $48 million. Other grants total $39.5 million.

School Share Down Slightly

The proportion of the provincial budget to be spent on health and welfare in the coming fiscal year is larger than last year and education's share is slightly smaller.

Figures in the budget released today show 35.7 per cent of total expenditures will be on health and welfare compared with 34.9 last year.

Education spending drops from 31.8 to 31.5.

Highways and ferries' spending will drop from 14 per cent to 13.7, general government costs will drop from 12.4 to 11.9 per cent and natural resources spending increases from 6.9 to 7.2.

Bennett's figures show that since 1959-60 the education share has risen from 18.5 per cent to 31.5 and health and welfare from 31.9 to 35.7 per cent of the budget total.

Servant Raise 6 Per Cent

Civil service salary increases averaging around 6 per cent are indicated in the provincial budget for the coming year.

A total of $7 million has been set aside to provide increases for the eighth consecutive year, Premier Bennett said in the budget speech.

Last year a total of $6.5 million was set aside for the province's more than 25,000 employees.

Bennett said that in the past 18 years the CS salary index has increased 141.7 per cent while the Consumer Price Index rose 45.2 per cent.

$40 Million Increase For Health

An increase of $40 million in health services spending to match growth is outlined in the new budget.

The increases will bring total estimated expenditures in health for the next fiscal year to $293 million. Health expenditures will be about 25 per cent of the budget.

The estimates include $60 million earmarked for the B.C. medicare umbrella, an increase of $10 million over that set aside for the program in the fiscal year 1969-70.

B.C. Hospital Insurance Service costs are estimated at $176 million for the next year. This represents an increase of $25.2 million.

Mental health service expenditures are raised by $4.4 million to a total of $39.6 million, and public health services will receive an additional $1.3 million to bring that total to $17.4 million.

RECORD AMOUNT

Premier Bennett pointed out that the $176.8 million for hospitalization and "the accelerating costs of hospital care" is a record amount and is an expenditure of over $83 on behalf of every resident in B.C., compared to $31 per capita in 1960.

The premier said that hospital construction currently under way in the province is valued at approximately $40 million and will provide 909 acute-care and 420 extended-care beds.

Projects nearing the construction stage are estimated to cost $25.5 million, he added. The Glendale Hospital, a 300-bed handicapped children's unit in Victoria, is expected to be completed by the end of 1970.

Welfare, Pensions Increased

Increased grants to old age pensioners and heads of households and dependents on welfare are key items in the government's social improvement program for the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Municipalities will be asked to earmark an extra $2 per capita in welfare funds as part of their share of increased allowances and payments totalling $8,750,000.

Total expenditures for the Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement—formerly Social Welfare—will be $108,113,000, up $20 million over the current year.

Premier Bennett said that effective April 1 this year the provincial supplement for old age pensioners will be increased to ensure senior citizens a monthly income of up to $150.

$150 MINIMUM

The federal old age pension is $79.58 a month. Pensioners can also apply for a federal supplement of up to $31.83, for a maximum contribution of $111.41 from Ottawa.

Pensioners in B.C. who qualify on a provincially-administered means test can currently receive a further supplement from the province.

Some 12,000 persons are now receiving provincial supplements ranging from $1 to $30.

The government is proposing to raise its supplement maximum to $38.59, which will enable some pensioners to collect a minimum of $150.

$5 MORE

A $5 welfare allowance increase to heads of households and dependents is also planned.

For a couple on welfare the boost will mean a $10 increase in monthly grants.

Under the current setup a married couple on welfare gets a $125 grant and $22.50 shelter allowance.

For a couple with five children the increased grant will add $35 to welfare cheques. A seven-person unit now gets a $250 grant, a $105 shelter allowance, and a $22.50 children's allowance for a total of $377.50 a month from the province.

The increased grant is expected to affect some 93,000 welfare recipients in B.C.

Also effective April 1 the government will increase support for nursing home patients by $35 a month to $280 and boarding home rates by $15 a month to $135.

$51.5 Million Surplus

Interim financial statements for the current fiscal year 'til December 31, 1969, indicate the province had a surplus of $51.5 million last Dec. 31.

Accrued revenues to that date total $847 million, and accrued current and operating and all capital expenditures total about $796 million.

Revenues are up $158 million or 23 per cent compared to the same period in 1968, and expenditures are up nearly $147 million or about 22.6 per cent.

RECORD REVENUE

The budget estimates government revenues at $1,166,177,00, projecting a further surplus of $717,415 next year.

The record revenue amount includes an increase in money coming into the government coffers of $141,695,000 over the fiscal year ending March 31, despite the announcement there will be no tax increases.

The largest increase in revenue will come in personal and corporation income taxes and succession duties and totals about $42 million. Total income from this source during the next fiscal year will total $296 million.

A $39 million increase in money raised from privileges, licences, natural resource taxes and royalties will jump revenue from those sources to nearly $215 million.

$12 Million More For Universities

The provincial government will spend $131.9 million on post-secondary education during the next fiscal year, an increase of $20 million over the current year.

Allocations to universities, six regional colleges, nine vocational schools, the B.C. Institute of Technology and adult education account for 36 per cent of total education spending, the same figure as in last year's budget.

The province's three public universities—Uvic, Simon Fraser and UBC—will receive a total of $92 million in operating and capital grants, $12 million more than in the 1969-70 fiscal year.

Breakdown of how much goes to each of the three schools will be announced later this year.

Education accounts for 31 per cent of the provincial budget.

The elementary and secondary public school system will absorb a total of $235,390,000 or 64 per cent of all education expenditures.

The figure includes $55 million in homeowner grants applied to reduce local school taxes.

●

"Along with the proposed $10 increase this year in the maximum provincial government homeowner grant, the cost of public school education will continue to have a minimal impact upon the resident home-owner," the budget speech said.

Operating grants to the 81 school districts under the government's finance formula total $158 million, up $17 million over the current year.

Grants to individual districts are based on the number of "teaching units." A teaching unit is composed of 20 secondary students or 30 elementary students.

"While the student growth rate has been slowing at the elementary school level, the need for expanded services at the secondary and post-secondary stages is expected to continue into the seventies."

Enrolment at the colleges and BCIT stood at 6,600 in September, 1969. There were 2,000 apprentice graduates from vocational schools last year.

Still Likes Guaranteed Income

Premier Bennett is continuing his fight for a guaranteed annual income in Canada.

In his budget speech today the premier stresses that "the strength of the nation lies in the individual citizen.

"It is for this reason B.C. endorses the principle of a guaranteed annual incom and a national standard minimum wage which will give all Canadians a sense of equality and encouragement in developing the greatness that is Canada."

These payments should replace direct Ottawa-to-provinces equalization grants, Bennett said.

NEW BORROWINGS AT $300 MILLION

A total of $300 million in new borrowing authorizations will be extended to B.C. Hydro and Power Authority and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway this year.

Hydro will get $250 million of that but Premier Bennett suggests "utmost caution" will have to be exercised in making use of the borrowing power in view of inflationary pressures.

The province's indirect debt, including Hydro and PGE borrowing, stood at $2.2 billion at the end of 1969, an increase of $183 million in a year.

Hydro borrowing accounts for $1.6 billion of the total. Last year Hydro was allocated $165 million in borrowing.

There is no discussion of proposed 15 per cent hydro power rate increases in the budget.

The PGE will receive $35 million out of current provincial revenue in share capital, repeating a move made last year by Bennett.

Bennett said this will assist the railway in its extension into the northwest part of the province.

STOP-GAP MEASURES URGED

Lack of Care for Cowichan Valley Aged Hit

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN — This community should be ashamed if it doesn't promote some type of intermediate facility for its elderly patients, a social worker said in a report released Thursday.

●

Mrs. Ann Piers, also a director of Cowichan's fledgling Family Life Association, made an extensive survey for Cowichan District Hospital on the problems faced by persons attempting to get extended care treatment in this area.

She suggested the "intermediate facility" provide some supervision, recreation, meals and concerned care until the 55-bed extended care wing is built.

A referendum is to be prepared and presented to Cowichan Valley electors sometime this year.

"The extended care hospital is not yet off the drawing boards and may not be built for a few years, but it could be filled today," Mrs. Piers said.

●

"There is no apparent way to rid our acute beds of the aged, chronically ill persons and as one goes he is replaced with two more."

MRS. PIERS . . . 'despairing fringe'

[illegible] extended care beds in Cowichan Hospital are all filled at present with 16 patients on an approved waiting list. Seven patients are in acute beds and nine are in community or nursing homes.

Mrs. Piers said all but three patients waiting for extended care are in the age group 75 to 95.

●

There are four "moderately acceptable" rest or boarding homes in the Duncan area which cater to 65 patients and these are all full, she said. Private patients pay $175 to $200 a month, depending on care needed.

Welfare will pay a basic rate of $120 rising to $150. There is no registered nurse supervision and, with the exception of one patient in each home, all are required to be ambulatory. Minimal medication is provided.

●

"To my certain knowledge, there are nine bed patients in these homes and many others are nearly bed-ridden. The licensing agent is becoming increasingly alarmed and at any time may decide this must stop.

"Then the hospital will have nine more bed patients to deal with."

Mrs. Piers said the operators themselves are refusing to accept welfare patients at their low rates and are being careful to see that new guests are entirely able to care for themselves.

"Quite apart from all these, I have in the past two months had appeals for help from seven aged persons who are too bedridden for home care — and this is just a small community."

●

Of her report, Mrs. Piers said: "This is just touching the despairing fringe of the problem. Nothing would induce me to search into it fully as I have no solution except to send in the overworked public health nurses."

Op-Rec Hopeful To Reach Goal

DUNCAN — Donations to Operation Recreation have fluctated from a torrent to a trickle, but its organizers are still confident they will reach their objective of $100,000.

Op-Rec chairman Pat Moore said Thursday proceeds are expected to total nearly $80,000 soon and "it's still possible to reach the top."

He said he was delighted with results of the fund-raising venture for the covered poool at Pioneer Park which began Sept. 15. Nearly every organization in Duncan and North Cowichan has been involved in some form of money-raising endeavor.

Moore said about $13,000, almost 100 per cent of the amount pledged during the walkathon, now had been collected. Canvass of local businesses is nearly complete with the industrial canvass still in full swing. Moore said when these are tabulated the Op-Rec total should be more than $80,000.

All the money accumulated so far is in maximum rate term deposits and has earned about $800 in interest, he said.

North Cowichan-Duncan Recreation Commission hopes councils of both areas will accept plans for the $400,000 project and prepare money bylaws for the balance to be presented to ratepayers this spring.

The recreation commision and local architect Mark Sharp have been invited to present plans and their budget for the proposed pool at the next meeting of the South End Ratepayers' meeting Feb. 26.

CENTENNIAL IDEAS SOUGHT BY LADYSMITH

LADYSMITH — Letters are being sent to every school and organization in town to ask for suggestions for a project to commemorate the 1971 centennial of the Union of British Columbia with the rest of Canada.

A spokesman for the centennial committee said today he hopes to get the widest possible interest in the event. School teachers are being asked to explain the significance of the centennial to students and ask them to make project suggestions.

The provincial government will provide a grant of 60 cents per capita which must be matched by the community. The minimum amount available for a project here would be about $4,200 based on the population of about 3,500.

Theatre Workshops Slated for Duncan

DUNCAN — A series of workshops designed for people interested in music and theatre with instruction by several well-known personalities will begin at Cowichan Senior secondary School Feb. 17.

Arranged by Duncan Musical Club, the first 7:30 p.m. session will feature Gil Bunch, well-known adjudicator and drama director who teaches at Brentwood College, Mill Bay.

Darryl Jones of Duncan who is now at the University of Victoria will direct the Feb. 24 workshop on make-up. "Production of a Show" will be the topic on March 3 when Alan Purdy is in attendance.

Purdy is past president of Victoria Theatre Guild who directed My Fair Lady and the King and I for the Victoria Operatic Society.

The final workshop on March 10 will be led by Mrs. Bill Murray of Duncan.

THREATENING TRIAL ORDERED

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Gordon Warner, 24, and Alfred Ronald Worthington, 20, were committed for trial at the spring assizes in Nanaimo when they appeared in provincial court here Tuesday charged with threatening a local businessman.

The men are alleged to have threatened David Hargrave, proprietor of a pizza restaurant, last November. The charge against a third man, Winfred Thomas, 23, was dismissed.

'WE SHOULD HEAR' POLLUTION BEEFS

A year-around legislative committee on pollution was urged Thursday by Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound).

He told the legislature the committee should travel around the province hearing submissions from individuals and groups to give the public direct access to elected representatives on a vital question.

The committee should continue from one session to the next, he said, reporting on all aspects of pollution, "its causes, effects and remedies."

Williams lashed the government for inaction on pollution. He said he had talked with a 15-year-old girl who expressed despair about the future of the country because of pollution.

That kind of attitude might be "emotional," Williams said, but added:

"It's only an aroused and angry people who will beat pollution."

Socred MLAs Again Chair All Standing Committees

Liberal leader Dr. Patrick McGeer Thursday proposed that an NDP member be the secretary of public accounts select standing committee but the move was voted down.

The suggestion was one of few incidents that interrupted a routine election of all committee chairmen and secretaries at the organizational meetings.

McGeer proposed Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) as the secretary, pointing out that the chairman of the public accounts committee in Ottawa is an opposition member.

In the mining and railways committee, Garde Gardom (L — Vancouver-Point Grey), suggested that the committee get mining industry opinions on the federal white paper on taxation, industry attitudes toward the marketing of stocks, and problems of exploration and provincial tax rates.

Robert Williams raised the matter of electing vice-chairmen to cover instances when the chairman is absent in the committee of forestry and fisheries. Chairman James Chabot (SC — Columbia) said he agreed the question should be raised but added that the proper place for it was in the legislature.

The committee chairmen are all Social Credit members. Besides Chabot, they are standing orders and private bills, Bert Price; public accounts, George Mussallem; mining and railways, D. E. Smith; agriculture, W. F. Jefcoat; municipal matters, Hunter Vogel; labor, Herb Bruch; social welfare and education, John Tisdalle; and the special committee on automobile insurance, Herb Capozzi.

Trades Council Heads Elected

Electricians' union business manager William Isbister has been re-elected president of Victoria District and Vancouver Island Metal Trades Council.

Secretary-treasurer Donald Douglas, of the shipwrights and shipyard General Workers' union, said 1970 officers also include vice-president Andrew Manson, of the Riggers' union, and sergeant at arms J. Hawkins, operating engineers. Trustees are Ovila Lalonde, operating engineers, and Stanley Hunt, Local 3 of the machinists union.

DRUG LAW ENFORCING URGED BY WOMAN MLA

Minister without Portfolio Grace McCarthy gave notice Thursday to the legislature that she will ask house members to "express their deep concern" over recent statements about marijuana attributed to federal Health Minister John Munro and Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mrs. McCarthy recently termed "irresponsible" a statement by Munro that the government would consider making marijuana use legal if it was found a significant part of the population used the drug.

The motion takes notice in particular of Canada's "international obligations to repress the unauthorized use of marijuana except for medical and scientific purposes by virtue of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961."

She urges the legislature to call upon the federal government to "fulfill their obligations" in regulating and controlling the use of drugs.

Skagit Valley Newest Park; Flooding Plan Unchanged

A 3,700-acre park in the Skagit River Valley was announced Thursday by Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan.

He said a recreation area of 32,000 acres would also be established around the park, near the U.S. border southeast of Hope.

Part of the valley is to be flooded to provide more power for Seattle City Light Co. under an International Joint Commission agreement which the opposition wants the government to renegotiate.

Kiernan said the flooding, if it occurs, will provide the park with 6,000 acres of "usable recreational water" when the level is high. But Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) disagreed that the water would be usable because it will be too cold.

Kiernan said a Class A park in the valley was dictated by long-range planning regardless of whether the valley is flooded.

Broyusson, who has led a campaign to have the Skagit Valley preserved from flooding, said that with the fall water draw from the reservoir behind the Ross Dam there would be "a sea of mud and stumps next to our new park."

Brousson said he wanted a 450 square mile park in the vally instead of the six square mile one announced by Kiernan. He thanked the minister "for listening to the campaign" but suggested that Kiernan had not done enough yet.

PEOPLE'S PARK

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) suggested the new park be named the "People's Park" because of the public efforts to save Skagit Valley.

Kiernan also announced a ban on tobogganing in Mount Seymour Park in the Vancouver area.

POLLUTION DEPARTMENT 'IMPOSSIBLE'

Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan Thursday rejected suggestions that a special department be set up for pollution control.

Several opposition MLAs and Social Credit backbenchers had suggested during the throne speech debate that the government should set up a department of environmental control.

Kiernan said that to burden one minister with the control of the environment would be to give that person "an impossible task." At present many members of the cabinet share responsibilities relating to pollution control, he added.

City Asked to Make Castle Renovations

The Craigdarroch Castle Society wants Victoria city council to spend more money on repairs, maintenance and landscaping.

Society president James K. Nesbitt in a letter to the city's finance committe Thursday complained that "last year the castle garden was a disgrace to the city" and that "the large grass terrace . . . became infested with weeds and was permitted to entirely dry out."

The brown grass, said Nesbitt, "caused much adverse comment from the many thousands of visitors."

Nesbitt noted that visitors to the castle voluntarily donated $7,000 during the course of 1969.

Nesbitt says the society wants to remove the "ugly modern lighting and replace it with chandeliers of the 1890 period."

While commettee members agreed to take the requests under advisement they bridled at Nesbitt's claim that "Victoria is singularly blessed with this castle and it must be preserved at all costs."

Said Ald. Tom Christie, a member of the city's Craigdarroch Castle committee. "He gets a little carried away sometimes."

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices continued to move narrowly on easier patterns at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

The rapeseed market continued to move nervously, with prices moving above and below previous close levels on small orders, buying interest remained light due to unsettled labor conditions on the west coast.

Flax continued fractionally easier in moderate scale down buying by exporters meeting offers from locals and commission houses.

Oats and barley remained almost neglected throughout the day with prices steady near previous close levels.

Rye was moderately active with good exporter buying of commission house offers on a scale down pattern.

Lakehead prices for Class Two and IGA wheat all were ⅛ cent higher.

Six Coast Mills Possess Permits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only half of British Columbia's 12 coastal pulp mills now have permits from the provincial government to discharge effluent into the sea, industry officials said Wednesday.

The remainder are working on their applications which must include results of detailed studies of all forms of water pollutants coming from the mills, which break down wood fibre with chemicals to turn it into pulp.

A survey of the eight companies operating coastal mills was made following an announcement in the Legislature by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell that the provincial government intends to shut down those mills that do not meet water pollution control standards by next January.

HAVE POWER

"We know that the government has the power to shut down a mill which does not meet pollution standards," said one forest industry executive.

"We feel we have to accomplish quite a lot in a short period of time. We must be infinitely better than we have been or there will be lots of trouble."

The executive felt it was a matter of what the pollution control branch and the public wanted.

"I think the government would find it hard to shut down a big mill right away and create unemployment if it was just a matter of esthetics.

LIST GIVEN

"Up to now on the Coast we have seen no proof that there has been any danger from mill discharge to fish, fowl or man."

The industry has spent more than $500,000 in research on water and air pollution problems in the past seven years. The budget for this year's work by the B.C. Research Council is $160,000.

The mills which currently hold provincial permits are MacMillan Bloedel for its operations at Port Alberni, Powell River and its fine paper plant near Vancouver; B.C. Forest Products for its Crofton plant, and Tahsis Co. for its Gold River mill.

Sixth permit issued is held by Scott Paper of New Westminster which does not operate a pulp mill but has permission to discharge water into Fraser River from its paper mill.

At Port Alberni, MacMillan Bloedel is spending $3,500,000 to install a two-stage treatment system which will provide a clarifier to take out solids and a 35-acre settlement basin. This basin will be the first of its kind on the Coast, although they are mandatory in Interior pulp mills.

A company executive said the company by the end of 1970 will have spent $17,000,000 on pollution control.

JUMBO tow, made up of 36 barges, moves slowly up Ohio River with a 47,000 ton cargo. The tow, pushed by a 5,000 horsepower diesel unit, is believed to be the largest ever to appear on the river. It spread out like an island covering six acres. The tow was made up above the Cannelton Dam at Tell City, Ind., moved through the docks at Louisville, Ky. and continued upstream dropping barges along the way.

Ford Offers Proposal To Halt Car Pollution

DETROIT (WP) — Henry Ford II says the Ford Motor Co. is ready to build all its cars with engines that operate on regular grade unleaded gasoline as soon as an adequate supply of the fuel is available nationwide.

Lead-free fuel is now sold only in the east by Amoco, subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

However, Atlantic Richfield Co. said it would produce a lead-free gasoline to be marketed in California late in 1971 if the auto industry designs an engine to use the fuel.

Lead is added to gasoline to improve engine efficiency. But it has been shown to be a major source of air pollution caused by motor vehicles.

Ford, in a letter to the heads of 19 oil companies, proposed a two-step plan for getting the lead out of gasoline. The letter was written Jan. 27 but was made public late Thursday when the company was asked to comment on the Atlantic proposal.

'MUSCLE CARS'

The letter indicated Ford is even willing to stop building high-horsepower engines that require premium fuels. Those are the big engines used in the so-called "muscle cars."

He said the changeover to unleaded gas could be kept orderly by retaining a two-fuel system used by most oil companies.

"One fuel could be lead-free with an anti-knock rating equivalent to that of today's regular grade fuel," he said. "All new engines manufactured by us following the countrywide introduction of this fuel would be modified to function properly with this fuel with emission control devices. This fuel would also satisfy the needs of 63 per cent of all used cars now in use."

Ford said the second fuel "could be leaded and would have an anti-knock rating equivalent to that of today's premium grade fuel. It would be available for use among the remaining 37 per cent of used cars."

Ford noted that he had committed his company to meeting lower emission levels as soon as possible and added "the sooner lead-free fuel is available, the better."

$60,000 in Fines By N.Y. Exchange

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Stock Exchange censured a leading investment firm and fined two partners and one former partner a total of $60,000 Thursday for failing to handle customer complaints properly.

The exchange censured the Francis I. Dupont Co. for complaints filed between September, 1968, and October, 1969, but it noted the firm had made "significant improvements" since last October.

A spokesman for Dupont said a "young, new and vigorous team" has been installed in a new office of management headed by Wallace Latour, a new senior partner.

"Our firm now represents an excellent example for the exchange community," he said.

The complaints, involving late delivery of securities and incorrect bills, occured during a period when many Wall Street firms were inundated with paper work and the exchange closed early to permit clearance of the backlog.

"We are ready to admit that our procedures were unavoidably unsatisfactory," the Dupont spokesman said.

The exchange fined the senior partner, Edmund Dupont $25,000 and Charles Moran, who was a managing partner and is now a limited partner, also was fined $25,000. Albert J. Coffey, operations partner during the period of violations and no longer with the firm, was fined $10,000.

The company itself was fined $5,000.

Bank to Pay Interest In Advance

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Fidelity Bank, a small three-branch Los Angeles area bank, said this week it had received inquiries from across the nation about a new savings offer under which depositors receive 5 per cent interest in advance.

Fidelity announced the new savings plan in which the interest is paid at the time of deposit on accounts to be kept in the bank at least two years and up to four years and 11 months.

On a savings account of $1,000 to be kept on deposit for the nearly five-year term, for example, a customer would receive $245.83 at the time he makes the deposit. On a deposit of $5,000 he would receive $1,229.17 interest in advance.

Should the customer withdraw his deposit before the time specified, the interest already paid would be subtracted from the principal amount determined by how long it had remained in the bank.

Industrial Age Brought To Reserve

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien Thursday signed an agreement designed to bring the industrial age to an Indian reserve near this southern Alberta city.

The Blood Indian band and Haico Manufacturing Ltd. with Chretien, representing the federal government, signed an agreement for construction of an 80,000-square-foot plant which will make mobile homes and sectional housing.

The plant, on the 352,000-acre Blood Reserve at Standoff, 32 miles southwest of Lethbridge, is to be in operation by July 1.

Initially, the plant will employ more than 100 Indians and eventually 200 with a payroll of more than $1,000,000 annually.

Todd Haibeck, Haico president, says the program "is going to work. We are now partners. We are blood brothers."

He said the Indians will not be exploited and will be paid the same union wages as workers in the company's Lethbridge plant.

Since Indian bands are not considered legal entities, the Bloods' Red Crow developments, a holding company, signed the agreement with Haico, a manufacturer of mobile homes and trailers at Saginaw, Mich., to form a company known as Kainai Industries Ltd.

At the outset, Haico will take 80 per cent of the gross profits and pick up 80 per cent of the bills.

A gain of two cents a share in nine-month net earnings is reported by Standard Broadcasting Corp. for the period ended Dec. 31.

Figures were $1.9 million (34.3 cents) vs. $1.8 million (32.3 cents) a year earlier Non-recurring gains were included in 1968.

F.I. du Pont

Francis I. du Pont and Co., one of the biggest U.S. brokerage firms, reports an operating loss of $7.7 million in 1969.

In 1968, du Pont had a pre-tax operating profit of $8.97 million and an after-tax profit of $4.76 million.

The 1969 results followed the general pattern for brokerage firms, which have attributed their setbacks to higher interest and operating costs and lower stock-market trading volume.

Boeing Cuts Work Force By 5,000

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing's Seattle-area work force was cut by 5,000 last month to about 75,000 and will continue temporarily to decline at this rate, the company said Wednesday.

Most of the January cutback came in the past two weeks. The effect showed up immediately in an increase, announced by Washington state, of 3,015 claims for state unemployment compensation in the week ended Jan. 24.

Boeing said that despite the heavy layoffs at this time there was no change in the 18,000 employment reduction it had listed previously as planned for the area during the entire year.

When the company announced several weeks ago it would trim its Seattle-area payroll to about 62,000 from 80,000 in 1970, it said most of the cuts would be made in the first quarter.

Boeing said the January total included 4,000 layoffs and 1,000 "voluntary terminations." About 3,500 were production employees and 1,500 salaried personnel.

Most of the reductions were in the commercial airplane division, with the rest mainly in the aerospace group.

The company said that in trying to soften the impact of the cutbacks it had contacted more than 600 other firms in the U.S. advising them "of the skilled, qualified people available," and some already had responded with job offers.

Boeing said earlier the decline from peak employment of 101,500 in its Seattle-area plants since June 1968 was a result of slower commercial jetliner sales, reduction in government spending, failure to win the advanced surface missile system competition and greater 747 production-line efficiency.

ARNOLD PALMER

ARNOLD PALMER VOTED . . . . . . U.S. ATHLETE OF DECADE

Victory for Personal Magnetism

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Palmer, whose boyish charm and faculty for miraculous comebacks sent professional golf into a multi-million-dollar spiral, today was named U.S. Athlete of the Decade.

The 40-year-old fairway slugger from the little mill town of Latrobe, Pa., beat out Bill Russell, towering basketball star of Boston Celtics, in a nation-wide poll of sports writers and broadcasters to select the top performer of the 1960s.

It was a victory for personal magnetism.

Although he did not dominate the game as thoroughly as Bob Jones in the 1920s, Byron Nelson in the 1940s and Ben Hogan in the 1950s and failed to overshadow his rivals as did men in other fields, no individual made such an impact on golf and the sports world generally during the period.

Arnie received 231 of 655 votes in a poll by The Associated Press, with Russell a close second with 194.

The blue ribbon personalities of the nation's major spectator sports — professional football and baseball — trailed far behind these two men, each a legend of his time.

Sandy Koufax, left-handed pitching ace of Los Angeles Dodgers, was third with 56 votes, followed by Johnny Unitas of Baltimore Colts, outstanding in a dazzling parade of football quarterbacks, 47, and Mickey Mantle, the home run punch of the New York Yankees, 43.

Rounding out the top ten, in order, were Willie Mays, baseball; Bart Starr, football; Jimmy Brown, football; Wilt Chamberlain, basketball, and Bobby Hull, hockey.

DUNCAN — If, after the past few days of persuasion, there lingers the suggestion that Duncan is the living legend of curling on Vancouver Island, then a suitable measure of satisfaction has been achieved.

Others may raise their hackles in protest, but they should be ignored. Besides it would only spoil the effect, not to mention the fun, which this is all about.

And why should anyone get sore at Duncan, or Cowichan?

Few communities better symbolize small-town Canada. Not only has Duncan successfully propagated a sport that did not have its roots implanted in the community until 18 short years ago, but it has other attributes of this nature that bear repeating.

Duncan had the first Little League baseball program on the Island, outside of Victoria.

It was a typical Duncan productiion. The kids were playing in a dust bowl with blocks of wood for bases. Sonny Bruce, who had played in the Old Island Senior League along with his brother, Gil, was disturbed at the plight of the youngsters. And he decided that something should be done about it, and done quickly.

Better still, he knew where he could find a listener.

Wilf Cain, the former Island basketball czar, was duly employed in town, and enjoying a brief retirement from sport. When Bruce explained the problem, Cain's retirement had ended.

The first stage was a membership drive. Duncan responded. In three weeks $600 was raised by $10 memberships. In two months, the total had passed the $3,000 mark.

Then everything jelled, as it has a habit of doing in Duncan. The Park Community Centre Association provided the land, volunteer workers did the labor; lumber for bleachers was donated, and the Duncan Little League was in operation.

●

Now a drive is on for a swimming pool to service not only Duncan but the entire Cowichan district.

This is not an ordinary swimming pool, but will be 25 metres in length, have an adjacent training area, and accommodation for 400. The estimated cost is $400,000.

Contributions and fund drives under an organization called "Op-Rec" have resulted in over $60,000 being raised to date. That goal is $100,000. Referendums will be put before the voters for most of the balance.

It is safe to assume that success is anticipated.

It was a similar story when curling began. As noted here previously, the Duncan citizens got solidly behind the drive initiated by Larry Marshall, first head of the Cowichan Co-Operative Curling Association. Most of the funds had been raised before the foundation was laid.

It was said at the time that there was no voluntary labor involved. But it was not fully explained that several of the workers took part of their wages in cash and part in shares of the Curling Association.

Which also is typically Duncan.

It wasn't the first rink on the Island. Nanaimo had that. But Duncan curlers did it better. Their timing was excellent, too, as they beat both Victoria and Port Alberni.

But not completely satisfied with that initial step, and needing more up-to-date premises and equipment, a new home was envisioned.

The present five-sheet rink on Sherman Road was opened three years ago this month.

And it is this $140,000 structure, financed through a club membership of between 350 and 400 curlers that, starting tonight, will be the venue of the Pacific Coast Curling Association playdowns.

●

But before the action starts, there doesn't appear to be any valid reason for not preserving a bit more of history. For there have been several in the area who have contributed greatly to the game, and helped to push it to its present pinnacle. Unfortunately, and unavoidably, there will be many others who will live on anonymously.

Actually, it all happened so quickly in the beginning, or so the story goes, the first club president wasn't even elected. Frank Middlemiss was appointed to the post by Marshall.

Through the years, more pulse was added by Murdie Robertson, Ed Mould, John Pye, Danny Robertson, Charlie Stroulger, Mel Smith, Al Taylor, Clayton Wright, Ken Hill, the current president, Don McCool, vice-president, and those Harpers, father Ron and son Glen.

They all deserve a curtain call. None have been more sincere.

It is true, as well that the more socially prominent members have been the Harpers, the Wilsons, the Kaspicks, the Berkeys, the Merretts, the Harvey Hodges and the Freddie Duncans.

This is simply because they have been good enough to compete nationally, and with distinction.

But there are others awaiting enshrinement. The Fulfords, the Valleaus, the Hughes, and many more, are just biding their time.

And then there is a crack junior, and high school program under Harry Dewar. These kids are good and getting better.

It all adds up to a lot of excellent curlers in Duncan, for many years to come.

And though it may be said in some circles that Duncan almost qualifies for that old chestnut: "Duncan? Oh, it's somewhere between here and there," don't you dare believe it.

"It's on Highway No. 1 North," and the sights are assured.

Those sights are the eight best curling rinks on the Pacific Coast, to be followed by the one best from the interior.

The only sad part is that there isn't a Duncan rink in the party.

But if Duncan couldn't win, these others must be something again.

They are.

O'Keefes Aim for Two

Victoria O'Keefes are planning to get more out of this Saturday's Pacific Coast Soccer League match against Eintracht than the single point they received during the last meeting earlier in the season, when the two squads finished in a 1-1 tie.

Coach Frank Grealy reports O'Keefes are at full strength with right-winger Peter Bateman, recovering from a bout with flu, the only doubtful starter for the two-point bid.

Game time is 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

JEAN BELIVEAU
. . . hitting stride

Big Jean Hits Old-Time Form At Right Time

By The Canadian Press

Jean Beliveau appears to be hitting his stride just when Montreal Canadiens need him most.

The big centre who missed a month of the National Hockey League schedule because of an ankle injury suffered last December, scored twice and assisted on a goal by Yvan Cournoyer Thursday night in a 5-3 win over Los Angeles Kings.

It was a key win for the defending Stanley Cup champions, holding them even with Boston Bruins in the battle for second spot in the East Division.

The Bruins also won, 5-1 over Philadelphia Flyers, leaving Boston and Montreal tied with 65 points, just three behind the leading New York Rangers.

In one other game, Detroit Red Wings strengthened their hold on fourth place in the east with a 4-1 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

OPENING WAS ROUGH

The Los Angeles contest, before a crowd of 11,310, was marred by a penalty-filled first period.

Montreal defenceman Ted Harris and Bill Flett of the Kings got the melee started with less than two minutes gone in the game. Within seconds, Bill White of the Kings and John Ferguson of the Canadiens joined in and the Kings' Ted Irvine and Canadiens' Terry Harper mixed it up in a third duel.

All six combatants were handed major penalties. In addition, Ferguson and Flett were assessed minor penalties and Irvine and Harper misconducts.

Referee Bill Friday sent Montreal's Henri Richard off with a game misconduct in the second period after the Canadiens centre, angered by a minor penalty handed him, slammed his stick on the ice, breaking it in two.

BROKE DROUGHT

Beliveau's first goal of the night at 15:49 of the first period was his ninth of the season and first since Jan. 8, the night he returned to the Canadiens lineup from his ankle injury.

The goal also put the Canadiens in front 2-1 and they never looked back with the Montreal captain getting his second goal early in the second period. Lucien Grenier and Jacques Lemaire rounded out the Montreal scoring.

Boston's Bobby Orr continued his scoring rampage with two goals and an assist to lead the Bruins to victory. The three scoring points gave the league-leading scorer a total 80 points, 13 ahead of team-mate Phil Esposito who also collected a goal.

TWO CITY RINKS SEEK PACIFIC COAST TITLE

Two Victoria rinks are among the eight qualifiers as play begins at Duncan Curling Club tonight at 9 in the Pacific Coast Curling Association playoffs.

Moe Hill of Playland will meet Glen Pierce of Burnaby, and Lyle Garraway of Victoria Club will meet Norm Thiessen of Nanaimo.

Champ Sidelined In Curling Chase

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Kevin Smale, defending British Columbia curling champion, Thursday night was sidelined in his bid for a second crack at the Canadian championships in which he finished second last year.

Smale's Prince George quartet lost two of its three games in the opening day of the Interior championships in what he called his worst day on the sheets in several seasons.

Smale, who lost 10-6 to unheralded Jim Flaten of Prince Rupert in the second round, bowed 10-5 to Al Lachance of Kamloops in the quarter finals of the A event.

Joining Smale on the sidelines was Paul Mamchur of Kelowna who bowed 11-5 to Gord Robertson of Trail after losing in the second round to Sam Olynyk of Revelstoke.

OLYNYK UNDEFEATED

Olynyk scored his third victory with an 11-10 win over previously unbeaten Rod Carmichael of Fernie.

In other A event contests, Buzz McGibney of Trail continued his fight to stave off a second loss by coming from behind three times to down Flaten 9-8 and hand the Prince Rupert shot-caller his first loss.

Other rinks eliminated Thursday were Ron McPhee of Kimberley, Doug Engstrom of Grand Forks, Red Koehle of Nelson and Lorne Gay of Whitehorse. All lost their first two matches.

Survivor of this event will meet the Coast champion to decide the British Columbia representative in the Canadian finals.

Oak Bay Tops Belmont Club

Belmont was crushed 54-9 by visiting Oak Bay in the final Inter-High Girls' Basketball League game of the season on Thursday afternoon.

Defeat dropped Belmont from the nine-team, Lower Vancouver Island tournament, Feb. 13 and 14 at Esquimalt.

Debbie Earns Most Cheers

By The Canadian Press

TORONTO (CP) — Two young women set world indoor track records Thursday night but it was a slim 16-year-old who missed who won the loudest cheers.

Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., twisting backwards over the bar at the Telegram-Maple Leaf Games, soared to six feet in the high jump—higher than any girl her age has gone before—and a Canadian open record.

But when she raised the bar two more inches to leap at the world record of 6-1¾, owned by Iolanda Balas of Romania, she found she didn't have enough left.

However, two world indoor records did fall.

Chi Cheng of China, in the first final event of the night, fought off world record-holder Mamie Rallins of Chicago to lower the time for the 50-yard hurdles to 6.5 seconds from 6.6. Miss Rallins equalled her record time to come second with Tereza Nowak of Poland third.

Cheryl Toussaint, 17, of New York, in her first crack at the 600-yard indoor run, set a world mark of 1:22.2, eclipsing the 1:22.4 set by Francie Kraker of the United States in 1967.

Miss Cheng, who later won the women's 50-yard dash, smiled when told she had broken the world record.

"The program was wrong," she said, adding that it was the first time she had ever contested the event.

She said she was "not in shape," that she had been back in action only two weeks after having a planter's wart removed from her left foot.

Miss Cheng, 25, is from Formosa and has lived in the U.S. for seven years. She attends California Polytechnical Institute at Pomona.

Miss Toussaint, 17, said she "practised very, very hard for this one, although this is the first time I've ever competed in this event."

"I'm an 880 gal. I went into the 600 because there was no 880 on the program."

CARLOS WINS TWO

John Carlos, the U.S. Olympic star drafted recently by Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, won two events and then became sick to his stomach and retired to his hotel.

Carlos repeated his 1969 meet victory with a time of 5.2 seconds for the 50-yard dash. His time was matched by Herb Washington of Michigan State, who was placed second. World record-holder Kirk Clayton, who has a time of 5.0, tied for fifth.

Carlos won his second event when he set a Canadian open record of 31.3 seconds in the men's invitational 300.

Another Canadian record fell in the invitational three miles when distance man Bob Finlay fought off marathoner Jerome Drayton. The Toronto runners were well ahead at the tape.

Finlay's 13:19.0 was a native record but was nearly 10 seconds off the world mark. The record he broke was his own—13.22.2 set last year. Grant McLaren of the University of Guelph was third.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

OUTDOOR REPORT

Rivers Right, But Few Fish

By STEWART LANG

Things can always change in a hurry, but today it appears that only persistent labor or good fortune will produce success on either fresh or salt water fishing excursions in Vancouver Island waters this weekend.

Although rivers are at the right level and coloration for good steelhead action these sea-run rainbows have failed to put in an appearance in significant numbers.

This is the situation all over the Pacific Northwest and biologists have suggested that the lack of fish may be due to a reduced survival rate in the ocean, stemming from changes in the marine environment.

However, a few steelies have been taken from the Cowichan, Somass, Puntledge, Tsolum and Cambell rivers.

Fish and wildlife branch reports from Campbell River indicate that the Quinsam, White, Gold and Salmon rivers may offer the best steelie prospects this weekend.

★ ★ ★

Although trout fishing success is now slight, with the only good spots reported at Shawnigan Lake and the head of Sproat Lake, this continued mild weather could bring about an early spring bite.

On the salt-chuck, spring salmon returns are spotty everywhere but blueback catches have increased lately in some local waters.

Saanich Inlet, in particular, has produced some good catches of blues for those working the surface with flashtail or bucktail near Goldstream Island, Willis Point, McKenzie Bay, Indian Bay, Coles Bay, Patricia Bay and Deep Cove. If the surface is dead calm, advises Bud Blackburn, it might be a good idea to weight the fly a little to get it further under the surface.

Art Hall reports from Goldstream that the bigger springs are around and have been caught now and then — with 400 feet of line and up to two pounds of weight.

Winter springs up to 24 pounds are hitting lures off Trial Island and Fiddle Reef in early mornings. Fishermen who are getting them are using herring strip on about 60 feet of wire line.

Wharf fishermen have been catching winter springs in Cowichan Bay, Comox and Campbell River by spin-casting. At Cowichan the bait was herring while in the latter two locations Buzz-Bombs have yielded the best numbers of fish.

Other areas indicating fair returns are Crofton, San Mateo Bay, Union Bay and Kelsey Bay.

BOBSLED SITE DECIDED

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP) — Cervinia, Italy, has been awarded the 1971 bobsled championships by the International Bobsled Federation.

Kelowna Buckaroos kept their ultra-thin hopes alive Thursday and further dimmed Penticton hopes in the process as they eked out a 7-6 British Columbia Junior Hockey League victory over Broncos before 750 fans in Penticton.

Victory moved Buckaroos to within 11 points of fourth-place Kamloops Rockets while the Broncos remained nine points behind Kamloops.

Bruce Wik blasted in the winning goal for Kelowna at 11:39 of the third period, only 35 seconds after Broncos had fought back from a two-goal, third-period deficit to knot the count at 6-6.

CATS IN VANCOUVER

In games scheduled tonight, Victoria Cougars will attempt to boost their lead over Vernon Essos to four points while tackling Centennials in Vancouver and New Westminster Royals will face the Buckaroos in Kelowna.

Vernon is only two points behind the defending-champion Cougars and has a game in hand.

Zeigler Leads Attack on Par

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The marathon Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic swung into the 54-hole phase today, with 36 more to go, and leading the way through the wreckage of par was Larry Zeigler, a young man who would just as soon watch ice hockey as play golf.

The tall, blond, 30-year-old from Terre Du Lac, Mo.—near St. Louis—broke out of a first-round tie with a seven-under par 65 Thursday and went into this third round with a score of 67-65—132.

It gave Ziegler a three-stroke lead over Australian Bruce Devlin, who had 67-68—135. Tied at 137 were former U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino, 70-67, and Moon Mullin, who followed a 72 with a 65, a competitive course record for the La Quinta Country Club.

Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer was just six strokes off the pace, tied with Jim Wiechers at 138. Volmer scored 69 on both the first two rounds.

Toronto's Al Balding was well back with a 142 after rounds of 74 and 68 while George Knudson, also of Toronto, stood at 71-74—145.

Ziegler, who won and finally collected $20,000 in the Michigan Classic last fall, has one particular goal.

"I'd like to win here so I can take a break and take in the Stanley Cup hockey playoffs," Ziegler said, explaining that while he could never learn to skate he has a deep passion for the game.

Junior Shuttle Stars Facing Busy Weekend

Junior members of Victoria's shuttle set are facing a busy weekend schedule.

Action starts tonight on two badminton fronts as a pair of Victoria-area teams battle squads from Vancouver Racquets Club for the right to represent British Columbia in national junior team playoffs.

On Saturday, and Sunday, the best young bird-bashers in the province will be competing at Cordova Bay Community Hall in the B.C. junior championships.

Dave Sorenson, Dave Howells, Bill MacPherson and Ross Woodland of the Racquet Club of Victoria are scheduled to tackle the mainland champions at Vancouver tonight in the junior men's team contest.

Esquimalt Badminton Club's junior women's team of Lyn and Sally Polson, Kathy Tuey and Liz-Anne Ogden face Vancouver rivals at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Winners of junior titles in the provincial meet at Cordova Bay will represent B.C. in the Canadian championship tournament at Winnipeg in April.

Both the junior women's singles and doubles titles are up for grabs since the 1969 winners have graduated into senior ranks. Top-seeded Susan Kolb of Vancouver is expected to face stiff opposition from Miss Polson in the singles.

Defending junior men's champion Randy Bourne of Richmond will try to compete despite a leg injury. Vancouverites Mike Epstein and Morley Jameson, together with Sorenson, the Victoria junior champ, should supply the main challenges.

Blaney and Janice Holloway of Vancouver are scheduled to defend their mixed doubles crown.

Play will continue through Saturday and Sunday with finals slated to start at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Santa Barbara Stirred World

WASHINGTON (AP) — There were bigger oil spills, but it was the Santa Barbara disaster just cne year ago that finally lubricated the creaky wheels of government.

Today, while driblets of oil still streak the sea off the California resort area, the federal government at last has begun to build the bulwarks needed for years against the growing threat of spilled oil.

That danger already had been emphasized almost two years before Santa Barbara when, in March 1967, the giant oil tanker Torrey Canyon rammed into a reef and spilled 119,000 tons of crude oil across the water which blackened the coasts of southern England and France.

AN EYE-OPENER

For the maritime nations of the world, it was an eye-opener.

"Before the sinking of the Torrey Canyon," says Kenneth Biglane, the interior department's top oil pollution expert, "the world had not realized so many square miles of water or land could be insulted by just cne accident."

President Lyndon B. Johnson ordered the secretaries of interior and transportation to assess the pollution defences of the 88,633 miles of shoreline in the United States.

In February 1968, they reported the country was "not fully prepared to deal effectively with spills of oil or other hazardous materials—large or small—and much less with a Torrey Canyon-type disaster."

The report recommended tougher anti-pollution regulations, stronger legislation, expanded research, strengthening of international agreements and development of a domestic contingency plan.

New legislation to bar pollution by land and sea facilities under threat of fines and imprisonment, and to put the clean-up costs on the polluter, was introduced in 1968 and did not pass.

On Jan. 15, 1969, Senator Edmund S. Muskie introduced similar legislation which is still alive in Congress.

On Jan. 28, an almost completed oil well being drilled from a platform 5½ miles off Santa Barbara went out of control.

For 11 days the oil coated some 800 square miles of water and lapped onto the white sand of a 25-mile beachfront until, Feb. 7, the well was sealed with concrete, shutting off the leak.

Spills large or small had been occuring without much public attention at the rate of about 2,000 a year. But Santa Barbara was too much.

Thousands of letters from outraged citizens poured into Washington.

Interior Secretary Walter Hickel moved fast and hard to tighten offshore oil regulations. He placed unlimited liability on an offshore operator to clean up any oil spill and bear the full cost, whether it was the operator's fault or not.

Meanwhile, an international oil pollution convention was amended last October to ban excessive dumping of oil anywhere on international waters.

The amendments now await ratification by the 40 member countries.

School Burns

SALMON ARM, B.C. (CP) — A two-room elementary school west of Salmon Arm, about 200 miles northeast of Vancouver, burned to the ground Wednesday. Cause of the blaze was not known. About 54 students attended the Gleneden school, but nobody was in the building at the time of the blaze.

Swedish Ferry Story Said 'Trial Balloon'

Recent reports the B.C. government is interested in buying a ship in Sweden to add to the coastal ferry fleet was described Wednesday as a trial balloon to see how the public reacts.

Neil Hindle, agent for the boilermakers and iron shipbuilders union, told Victoria Labor Council he hopes the government would maintain its policy of buying Canadian.

"We are desperately trying to establish a shipbuilding economy," Hindle said, moving the council petition the government to ask that all ships bought or built by it be of Canadian origin.

"I believe the government is flying a balloon on the purchase of a ferry in Sweden," he said.

The policy of buying ships made in Canada is important not only to those earning their living in the shipyards, he said, but also to bring home to the public how much technology is contributed by the industry.

Maintaining the B.C. policy will help Canada develop a national marine policy and perhaps bring about a Canadian merchant marine, Hindle suggested.

"I hope the premier of this province won't be sidetracked by any short-term gains by purchasing a ship outside of B.C.," he added. The council passed his motion.

'Newspapers Judged by Their Own Community'

OTTAWA (CP) — Four daily newspapers representing widely separate readerships in Canada have expressed diverse views about relations between press and public in submissions to the special Senate committee on mass media.

The committee released today the submissions of Montreal-Matin, two Ontario dailies—the Sudbury Star and Kingston Whig-Standard—and The Columbian of New Westminster. None is scheduled to be represented in person at committee hearings.

Among other subjects, the committee has invited comment on relations between newspapers and the public, especially on suggestions that a press council or councils on the British pattern should be established in Canada.

Such councils, representing both newspapers and the public, air grievances and form a liaison between the press and readers.

Montreal-Matin said it would support establishment of provincial press councils rather than a national body.

SCOPE TOO LARGE

"A national council could not . . . make adequate pronouncements regarding journalistic problems that concern the Maritime provinces at times, Western Canada at other times, and more particularly that concern the province of Quebec along with the rest of the country," the morning newspaper says.

The Sudbury Star, one of the Thomson Newspapers group, commented through publisher J. R. Meakes:

"The local newspaper is judged by its own community—accountable to local public opinion. . . . We do not believe that a press council can prescribe a modus operandi if the press is to remain free."

Michael Davies, publisher of The Whig-Standard, said he is accessible to discuss with anybody any question of his newspaper failing to act responsibly.

"Therefore, I feel formation of a press council would be redundant but if the majority of my peers were interested, I would not strenuously object."

The Columbian, which publishes separate editions for each of the suburban Vancouver communities of New Westminster, Surrey, Burnaby and Coquitlam, made no direct comment on the press-council idea but cautions:

"A free press—free of government control—is essential to the existence of responsibility to the people by any government."

Commenting on another committee concern—concentration of ownership in newspaper groups—Mr. Meakes said local control of editorial viewpoint has characterized the Sudbury Star's policies under four forms of ownership during his career there—personal proprietorship, a willed trusteeship, owned jointly by himself and three other Sudbury citizens and, since 1955, as part of the Thomson group.

"As a member of the Thomson group, the newspaper is notably less exposed, less vulnerable to financial and social pressures from 'elite groups' in Sudbury or elsewhere," he said.

IS NOT REALISTIC

Mr. Davies said he would prefer to see most of the media independently owned, but it could never be a reality. Newspapers nowadays were costly enterprises, family shareholders did not wish to lock all their capital into one asset and taxes and estate duties tended to dilute ownership on passing between generations.

Succession duties played "a major role" in the family's sale of the Peterborough Examiner to the Thomson group and the currently-proposed sale of radio and television stations in Kingston and Peterborough to Bushnell TV Co. of Ottawa, Mr. Davies said.

The Columbian commented:

"We recommend that government intervention in any media be undertaken only if there is significant need.

"Concentration in the media does not, and never will, approach the concentration of power in the hands of the government."

Amchitka Blast Opposition Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sierra Club of British Columbia announced Thursday it is launching a Don't Make a Wave campaign to protest the U.S. plan to hold a several-megaton nuclear blast on Amchitka Island, in the Aleutians.

The aim is to form a united action front of all conservation and anti-pollution groups, and get mass support from college and high school students.

The committee on environmental protection for the club, which is a branch of the U.S. conservationist Sierra Club, says the Amchitka explosions threaten B.C. with tidal waves, earthquakes and radioactive pollution.

James Bohlen, the club's education officer, said in a statement that the U.S. ignored widespread protests against "insane ecological vandalism" in setting off the first Amchitka nuclear blast last fall.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission announced Monday that it plans an underground nuclear blast of several megatons on Amchitka Island at a date to be fixed.

The blast will be three times more powerful than last year's Amchitka explosion.

Statement to the Senate Committee on Mass Media by W. Arthur Irwin, vice-president of Victoria Press Limited and publisher of the Victoria Daily Times.

The purpose of this statement is (a) to outline the structure, policies, operating procedures and competitive situation of Victoria Press Limited, of Victoria, British Columbia, and its two daily newspapers, The Daily Colonist and the Victoria Daily Times; and, (b) to comment briefly on the implications for newspapers of certain contemporary trends in mass communications.

CORPORATE STRUCTURE

Both papers are long established, the morning Colonist dating back to 1858 and the evening Times to 1884. Victoria Press Limited was incorporated under B.C. statute in 1950 jointly by the then proprietors of the two papers to assume ownership of both. Since 1959 the company has been wholly owned by F.P. Publications of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Victoria Press in turn is the sole owner of the Colonist Publishers Limited and the Times Publishers Limited which hold certain news franchises. These companies, however, are neither production entities nor companies of account, Victoria Press being the owning, operating and accounting company for both papers.

As vice-president of Victoria Press I am responsible to the proprietors for the administration of that company. As publisher of the Times I am also responsible for the editorial direction of that paper. R. J. Bower is publisher of the Colonist and carries total responsibility for the editorial direction of that paper.

OPERATING PROCEDURES

The two papers jointly utilize facilities owned by Victoria Press, located at 2631 Douglas Street—in Victoria. These include administrative, accounting, advertising and circulation establishments and a production plant each of which is supervised by a departmental manager responsible to the company's general manager, J. C. Melville.

The advertising department sells space on an optional basis into either or both papers with a joint rate being offered to users of both. In addition to maintaining its own local sales force this department benefits from F.P. Publications sales activities in the national advertising field in Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

Operation of the circulation department is integrated at the management level but the department maintains two separate field sales forces, one for each paper. The Colonist has 40,200 circulation and the Times 32,200. Eighty-five per cent of the distribution is concentrated in the Victoria metropolitan area situated on the southeastern extremity of Vancouver Island (population 185,000). Most of the remainder is distributed "up-Island," the Colonist reaching as far to the northwest as Gold River, some 230 miles from Victoria.

The production plant is completely integrated. It operates on a two or three-shift basis, depending on the divisions involved, and thus benefits from the economies of intensive fixed capital use. It also has the advantage of being able to draw on the technical expertise not only of the central F.P. organization but of other newspapers in the F.P. group.

EDITORIAL AUTONOMY

The committee will have noted that R. S. Malone, president of F.P. Publications Limited, in a brief scheduled for presentation January 22, 1970, defines the principle in which F.P. editorial policies are based, in the following terms: "No central direction of editorial policy in the eight daily newspapers (of the F.P. group) has been sought or even considered . . . Our belief is that each newspaper should retain its individual character in the collection and presentation of news and in its editorial opinion."

This stipulation applies to the management by Victoria Press, of the Times and the Colonist. The editorial staffs of the two papers are not only separate and self-contained but highly competitive. In each case the publisher has sole responsibility for the selection and direction of staff. In each case the publisher through his editors is solely responsible for both editorial policy and the presentation of news. In my capacity of vice-president of Victoria Press I am responsible for the general administration of the company but Mr. Bower is the sole arbiter of Colonist editorial and news policies.

The two papers began life at opposite political poles and although the extreme partisanship of the early years has long since eased, opposition of political attitudes still obtains, the Times being independent liberal in its orientation and the Colonist independent conservative. The community thus has the diversity of choice which applied when ownership was separate.

COMPETITIVE SITUATION

Victoria is one of only three unilingual cities in Canada of comparable size or smaller where two autonomous editorial voices have survived the attrition resulting from the rising costs of recent decades; and I believe this would have been unlikely, if not impossible, without benefit of the economies of scale derived from integration of the infrastructure of the two papers.

As elsewhere the two papers are exposed to competition for both audience and advertising from a variety of agencies. Six neighborhood weeklies, one university weekly, and a weekly advertising shopper operate in the area. Their combined claimed distribution approximates 90,000 and the last named is a not inconsiderable factor in the retail advertising field. In addition, one department store and a grocery chain distribute their own advertising flyers.

The principal competition, however, is that of the electronic media. The city is served by three local AM radio stations, one FM station, one local television station and a cablevision system (Victoria Cablevision Limited) which, with 40,000 subscribers, is one of the largest in Canada. By reason of its geographical position off the State of Washington coast some 40 miles south of the 49th parallel the city is exposed not only to broadcasts and telecasts originating in the Vancouver area but to a wide range of American transmissions from the Seattle-Puget Sound region. Medium power domestic receivers log some 45 AM radio stations of which approximately three fourths are American. The programs of 10 television stations, seven American and three Canadian, and 25 FM stations are transmitted by the cablevision system.

Continuing extension of this electronic barrage, though of substantial competitive importance, does not appear to have had as pronounced an effect on the community's reliance on the printed word for information as might have been anticipated. In 1951, with no television, the combined circulation of the two papers in the Victoria metropolitan area was 357 copies per thousand of population. By 1961 the ratio had declined to 309 per thousand. By 1969 it had recovered to 334, despite the pressure on audience time of 10 telecasts and a substantially increased number of radio programs.

It might be noted that the period of print recovery roughly coincides with the strengthening of the newspapers' financial base resulting from entry into the F.P. group but whether or not this has been a determining factor in the balance of print against electronic picture and sound in the area, the emerging pattern clearly reflects the growing consumption of, and hunger for information which I believe is one of the significant characteristics of our time.

How effectively is the newspaper responding to the challenge implicit in this hunger?

CHANGE THE DOMINANT

Broadly speaking, my answer is: Not as effectively as it should, both in its own interest and in the interest of the society to which it owes its being. That is not to say that during the 50 years spanned by my working life in the mass communications field the newspaper has not improved. It has. It is less partisan, less inhibited, less parochial; better staffed, more skilled in the swift processing of news, better served by a vastly increased range of news sources. It is not necessarily more accurate and I doubt that it is wiser. But on average it is a better newspaper and a few papers are notably better. Nevertheless, I believe that on balance the newspaper has been slow to meet the challenge of change in a world of galloping change.

Ours is an era of revolution in the fundamental sense of the word. Systems, structures, techniques, values, faiths—all are under strident attack and in process of basic re-evaluation and swift transformation. For countless millions the familiar moorings no longer offer sure anchor. New knowledge proliferates on a scale beyond individual comprehension. The technological imperatives of the time drive implacably toward integration yet the sheer weight of accumulated knowledge pushes toward specialization and fragmentation. Confronted by the giantism of contemporary institutions the individual senses deep menace to individuality itself.

Add to this the acquisition by man of the power to destroy the viability of his environment — and himself—and you have a world which is not only confused and confusing but infinitely complex, turbulent, threatening, even terrifying.

PRINT WILL PERSIST

All mass media are caught in the consequences of the upheaval, newspapers not least. Some critics argue that the printed word is in decline, that it will be replaced by electronically transmitted picture and sound. I disagree. So long as structured language remains the vehicle for reasoned communication among civilized men, in fact so long as civilization itself persists, there will have to be means of storing and retrieving language. It can be stored and recovered as visual symbol, that is as print, or as sound, but visual symbol will survive for the simple reason that retrieval by eye is swifter and more efficient than by ear. We are not going to revert to the pictograph and the Neanderthal grunt. The real question is not survival of the printed word but how it is to be produced and distributed.

This applies with particular force to the daily newspaper. After half a century or more of technological immobility, newspaper production methods are now in the early phases of a radical reshaping. The innovations either current, pending or projected are so fundamental, the options so various, that even the experts are unsure about ultimate solutions. It is broadly clear, however, that data transmission speeds will increase by factors of anywhere from 10 to 100 or more; that automation will become increasingly pervasive; that the traditional manipulation of metal in typesetting and other areas will tend to give way to the manipulation of light or other forms of energy; and that the computer and other electronic devices will come increasingly into play in the assembly, storage, editing and processing of textual and graphic material. No one seems to be certain as to what the preferred press technique will be 20 years from now and the electronic distribution of at least part of the finished product direct to domestic receivers is a distinct possibility.

Coping with the technological onslaught during the next two or three decades will demand of newspaper executives a high degree of intellectual adaptability and management expertise. It will also require very large capital investment.

THE NATURE OF NEWS

But even more important in my book will be the manner in which newspaper direction responds to the effects of the global upheaval on the nature of news to the implications of electronic competition and to the changing shape and needs of the contemporary audience.

The first point I would make here is that 20th century conditions have significantly altered the nature of news. Traditionally, news is defined as new information about recent events or, alternatively the events themselves as subjects for report. Reportable events are those occurring at specific points in time and space, and the greater the novelty, the more exceptional, unexpected, dramatic or disruptive the event the more newsworthy the news. In the relatively static social and technological context of a simpler time news defined in these terms was easily recognizable against a familiar background, easily communicated, easily assimilable and reasonably satisfying.

The pace, depth and pervasiveness of 20th century change have profoundly modified this pattern. The sheer volume of new information has enormously amplified the dimensions of newness. So far from being exceptional newness has become a substantial part of normality. Furthermore, the labyrinthine complexities of the new knowledge have shattered the old simplicities. Most of what is new and significant is no longer communicable in terms of the neatly identifiable specific event. Basic news has become process rather than event. The idea and its linkages, its rooting and its flowering, have become more newsworthy than the isolated and simplistic accident.

Such gradual and multi-centred changes as the progressive polluting of the global envelope, the rise of materialism, the revolt against reason, did not happen yesterday or last week. They do not conform to the traditional standard of what is reportable. Yet they cry out for structured recording as news of fundamental consequence in a world groping for sense of direction.

ELECTRONIC COMPETITION

All media share the necessity of adjusting to the new environmental condition. The daily newspaper, however, has also to contend with the radical change in its own status and function as a mass communicator resulting from electronic competition. Where formerly it enjoyed total monopoly in its field it now has not only lost that monopoly, it has also lost one of its most cherished and potent lures, that of being first with news of the news "event." This function began to vanish the moment instant and universal audibility of the spoken word and instant and universal visibility of occurrences in the external world became technically feasible. Universality is by no means wholly achieved but the principle is established. Neither the speeding news truck nor the perambulating news boy compete with the speed of light.

That the newspaper has continued to grow and prosper in the face of this kind of competition attests its viability as a mass communicator. Television is a remarkable means of enabling a viewer to experience a distant event. It has a superb ability to convey the quality of a person or of a social situation. But it has serious disadvantages which more often than not are the converse of newspaper advantage. It is fleeting. It lacks flexibility and depth, can fail lamentably in dealing with abstractions, is extravagant in its consumption of the recipient's time and demands a completely passive acceptance of a predetermined information continuity which may not fit the recipient's interest or need.

The newspaper, on the other hand, offers a range, volume and detailed depth of information which over any given time span television cannot begin to match—a half-hour news telecast transmits content approximately equivalent to that of a newspaper front page. The newspaper is permanent so long as the reader wishes it to be so. Its mosaic format allows complete selectivity and recall of subject matter at the reader's will. (This advantage will diminish as selective retrieval from stored videotape becomes possible.) Its capacity to deal with abstractions and with process is limited only by the perceptive and creative skills of its producers. It also has a phychological advantage. The reader can touch it, feel it, possess it, rather than be possessed by it. And paradoxically, it has television—and radio—to shill for it. Watch a reader plunge into a newspaper and the chances are he'll go first for the subjects he already knows about. He wants to know if the professional sees as he saw, discover if his prior judgment is vindicated. "Experience translated into a new medium," says McLuhan, "liberally bestows a delightful playback of earlier awareness."

The caveat one must enter here, however, is that electronics in general and television in particular are still in the early stage of their development. We yet have to discover the consequences of near universal adoption of high multiple two-way cablevision. (It probably will and should become a common carrier.) Few would care to predict the effect of the fragmentation and specialization of telecasting which could flow from use of the laser beam as a program carrier. And not even the wisest of technological prophets can gauge the precise outcome of direct broadcasting from satellites to home receivers, probably not more than 10 years distant: The only certainty is continued dynamic restructuring of the competitive pattern.

AUDIENCE CHARACTERISTICS

Which brings me to the challenge implicit in the changing character of the audience. Here one notes a rising education level, increase in the proportion of the young, growing sophistication and an expanding affluence. All are modifying audience attitudes and, in consequence, the direction of demand for information.

Education enormously extends range and depth of intellectual curiosity and the speed at which education is spreading is nothing less than phenomenal. (In 1955 there were 73,000 students in Canadian universities. By 1975 the count will be 670,000, a ninefold increase in twenty years, and the multiplication rate is accelerating.) Youth accepts novelty, searches for meanings and demands answers. Sophistication lowers inhibitions, alters taste and punctures distortion of reality. Affluence produces leisure which offers time for pursuit of knowledge.

More all embracing is what might be termed the pervasive psychic set of the audience in a time of turmoil and uprooting. Nothing seems stable, all is motion. Traditional patterns shatter and the result seems chaos. The relentless pressure of an unending flood of seemingly random events at best induces bewilderment, at worst near panic — or retreat into passivity. The individual is aware of his own fatal involvement but feels his world is adrift and he with it. He hungers for intelligibility, yearns for structure, longs to find some order in his universe. Put simply, he wants to be told what's going on, what it means and where to look for the road to tolerable survival.

THE NEWSPAPER'S RESPONSE

What should be the response of a contemporary newspaper to the situation I have tried to sketch? It seems to me that a convergence of imperatives clearly indicates the answer.

If news is trend and complex process rather than isolated event then the newspaper must follow. It explores the trend, dissects complexity.

If the immediacy of the electronic media can't be matched, the newspaper seizes on the known and expounds its meaning. In so doing it generates a new news.

If audience craves intelligibility in a seemingly patternless world, the newspaper probes for pattern.

Depth reporting, comment, interpretation, analysis, background reporting, call it what you will, the direction is clear. I do not imply an end to reporting of the newsworthy event. The search for novelty will remain a basic newspaper function. But more and more that search will centre on the perception and communication of linkages between fact and idea and idea and event — and the import for people of all three. This in my view will constitute the core of successful print journalism in the future. What the ultimate form of the newspaper will be I do not know but I believe that in substance it will turn out to be something which in today's terms we would describe as a daily news magazine.

One has only to look at some of the leading newspapers on this continent and in Europe to realize that the trend in this direction is already operative, in some cases with superlative results. But in general the transition will involve much hard adjustment. Too many journalists are wedded to an outmoded concept of news, are trapped by the fact that the familiar is more easily communicated than the new, the simple more easily than the complex. Too many are content to accept passively a routine information flow which results in today's news being defined as that which is most like yesterday's. Nevertheless, in my view the change is certain. The logic of necessity demands it.

One must not underestimate the costs of the new approach. These will be high in terms of time, talent and money. But the wise director of any journalistic enterprise knows he is operating an essential public service, that his product is only as good as the quality of its content and that if content fails to satisfy the deep-felt information needs of the time, his enterprise is endangered.

THE BASIC CHALLENGE

There can be no question as to the essentiality of the service. The simple fact is that in contemporary society the journalistic process, whether of print or sound and picture, is indispensable to the functioning of any system of self-government. In its own vague way the public understands this truth. It senses too that the general health of society is directly related to the adequacy of the flow of information within it. Journalism is not the only great information system — education and the arts fall in the same category — but the challenge to all journalism is plain and to print journalism unmistakable. The message is the message and society has both right and necessity to demand that it illumine reality. Here lies the newspaper's essential responsibility and basic function. Its rise or fall as a medium of mass communication depends on the skill and wisdom with which it meets this challenge.

THE PROBLEM OF POWER

One further point: the always refractory question of locus of power in a social situation. Who controls the journalistic process?

In a free society the ultimate answer is, of course, the people, for the people possess the right of acceptance or rejection. There can be no journalism without an audience and history records innumerable instances of journalistic institutions being vetoed into oblivion by the exercise of this right. It is society's most powerful weapon against deliberate abuse, or mismanagement of the journalistic function.

But I am speaking of the operating power, the power of editorial decision, the power to shape the style and substance of the flow of news and comment. Here, I submit, the answer must lie in adherence to the twin principles of pluralistic autonomy and free exercise of professional responsibility. If society is to be free, its journalism must be free; if journalism is to be free, it must be autonomous. And autonomy means that power of editorial decision must be exercised within the system without interference, barring accepted legal restraint, from any outside source whatsoever. State regulation of physical communication facilities, yes if technologically imperative; dictation of content, no. That way lies totalitarianism.

PLURALISM THE ANSWER

Equally vital: within the system there must be pluralistic dispersal of editorial power for only in a diversity of voices is there hope of finding truth. Here there are difficulties. Electronic transmission of universal immediacy equates with universalized reception and demands a transmission system which lends itself to centralized control of program content. How then does one ensure diversity of view? Possible answer may lie in new techniques providing a multiplicity of windows on the world at costs both economically and socially justifiable.

With press journalism the problem is somewhat different. Technological and financial imperatives have produced the group but here technique permits, and necessity demands, localized decision. Here monolithic control is self-defeating. The health of the group can be no greater than that of its parts; and the part to be viable must remain rooted in its own community, must be directed by men of the community who can speak for and to the community. No centralized control in a distant megalopolis can meet this criterion. Pluralistic dispersal of the editorial power is the only answer.

And finally: whatever the ills of journalism only journalists can cure them. Journalism in the sense in which I have tried to define it is a creative process. Its direction demands the creative mind operating in a free environment. Regulation by authority cannot create. External dictation won't create. Only the professionally oriented free mind of the trained and dedicated journalist can solve the problems of achieving socially adequate communication through journalistic process.

In short, only journalists can make journalism work.

Biodegradability—Is It Key To Detergent Pollution?

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

This week on the floor of the Legislature, Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson, said that as a homemaker she is vitally concerned about pollutant qualities of detergents now in domestic use. So much so that a while back she instituted her own campaign to discover the qualities of various detergents on the market and the ingredients included in them.

She spent days going along store aisles where there were displays of detergents "packaged in every hue, emblazoned with stars, circles and pictures of lily-clean hands."

She learned a lot of new words like enzymes and enzolves. She read of new cleaning miracles "but what was new was not stated."

Nowhere did she find simple, specific wordings that gave easily understood facts and not superlatives.

In the course of her research she became familiar with the word biodegradable, a term that means a detergent is capable (that is to say — 90 per cent capable) of being broken down by bacteria in a matter of hours.

She also discovered that while many detergents now sold are partly biodegradable, they are not wholly so. And that "the key to biodegradability is the speed with which the substance breaks down . . . and the importance of the speed factor in relation to the substance is to ensure that phosphates are broken down quickly."

★ ★ ★

Here, the Legislature was told that "The homemaker must know if doing away with phosphates in detergents will indeed help the pollution malaise, whether the effluent runs off by way of a sewage system or a septic tank.

"She has a right to know whether biodgradability is a concrete solution . . . half-truths are not enough."

To speed this knowledge, the minister had set up her own experiment. From under her desk she produced the evidence — eight neatly capped glass bottles filled with pink, purple, green and colorless liquids.

Brands of detergents reported recently in the press as having certain levels of phosphates (with the exception of those with less than one per cent content) were used.

Measurements for each test were exactly the same and the "quantity required" as noted on the jars was the quantity recommended on the package of each product, specifically for top-loading automatic washing machines. These products were thoroughly mixed with water a week before they made their debut on the floor of the Legislature, to ensure every opportunity of achieving dissolution.

★ ★ ★

Some of them broke down in a few hours. Some in a few days. In one instance only — and that was in the case of "a concentrate, but a non-pollutant and biodegradable" was there no sediment left in the bottom of the jar and the product appeared to be almost completely dissolved.

Later, in her own office Mrs. Dawson showed me that test jar. She shook it. Turned it upside down. It remained colorless and with no evidence of foam.

She picked up another jar. Shook it. Immediately it foamed and produced suds.

Sediment was evident in varying degrees in seven of the jars.

Isobel Dawson doesn't plan to stop with her eight jars of evidence. Now she is going to have the sediment in each one of those jars analyzed by experts.

She believes that "homemakers are most anxious to help search out an answer to the pollution problem . . . but in order to help they must know the truths from the half-truths in the detergent area."

Therefore the "whole aspect of biodegradability, in relation to detergents, should be pursued . . . not only by those in government but also by those concerned in the production and use of the modern washing compound."

She herself intends "to keep talking and working" toward this end. She hopes all women with the same concern will join her.

"After all, detergent or no detergent, the family wash must be done. Give us the answers and we'll get on with the job."

WOROBETZ NEW VICEROY

REGINA (CP) —Dr. Stephen Worobetz, a Saskatoon surgeon, this week became Canada's first lieutenant-governor of Ukrainian descent.

The 55-year-old native of Krydor, Sask., swore to do his best for the people of Saskatchewan as their 13th lieutenant governor.

He received the Great Seal of the Province, symbolic of the trust put in the Queen's representative in Saskatchewan.

ASTURIAS: Province in turmoil

Since the bloody civil war of 1936 the most obvious opposition to Gen. Franco has risen from the mines of Asturias.

Spanish Government Strength Tested by Asturias Miners

OVIEDO, Spain (AP) — For years, the rich coal mines of Asturias province in the mountainous north of Spain have kept the nation's industrial fires burning.

And, since the regime of Gen. Francisco Franco took power in the bloody civil war of 1936 the most obvious opposition to the dictator has risen from the mines of Asturias.

Now, the mines are nearly exhausted. But the miners are not, and Asturias remains a hotbed of anti-Franco sentiment.

Independent labor unions are illegal in Spain. The only legal labor organizations are government-approved syndicates. The leaders of the syndicates, though elected by their memberships, are responsible primarily to the government.

●

In the past, a strike in Spain — particularly one in Asturias — was regarded as a subversive activity at the least. They have been interpreted by the government — and often justifiably so — as a defiance of the Franco regime.

A long strike in 1962, in which miners were arrested, beaten and even killed, was the most significant display of anti-Franco sentiment since the civil war.

In 1967, some 7,000 miners stayed away from their jobs for a time in protest against the sudden and unexplained decision to stop meagre pension payments to about a dozen miners who had been dismissed during the 1962 strike. The 1967 unrest petered out as the government watched apprehensively.

●

Now there is again labor unrest in Asturias. In January, more than 40,000 miners in the region refused to go to work, forcing production to a standstill. The issue that set off the January strike was a Christmas bonus which was not raised along with regular wages.

A week after the strike had started, half the 40,000 miners went back to work.

Although there is litlte chance that the latest strike will equal the bloody conflict of 1962, the government is worried. It happened at a time when the question of Franco's successor is causing no small amount of political uncertainty.

Although the successor already has been named — it's Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, who has sworn he will be steadfast to the system built by Franco when he becomes king — he will need labor's support to solidify his position against other factions which are beginning to surface in Madrid as Franco's reign nears its end.

Even though the syndicates are now strictly controlled by the government, many leaders of the authorized labor groups secretly look forward to the day when Franco no longer is on the scene. The syndicate leaders know that of some 20 million qualified voters in Spain, their members comprise eight million.

Faced with figures like these, any post-Franco government will be aware it must have labor's support to prove it is popular, and therefore legitimate. And it knows that a harsh repression of current labor unrest could cause the loss of the support it needs.

●

On the other hand, if the government follows a soft line in dealing with the miners of Asturias, it could result in a widespread epidemic of discontent which has been suppressed for a long time.

So far, even verbal condemnation of the miners' recent strike by government officials has been unprecedentedly mild.

Newspapers in Madrid, instead of condemning the strikers as might have been expected, have called for a radical new labor law which would recognize the right of the miners to organize and strike.

As the workers began to go back to the mines in Asturias, no one was really sure if the strike was ending or if general labor unrest was merely taking a temporary pause. The answer, whatever it is, could prove vital to Spain's future.

MONTREAL (CP) — The city and the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood are being sued for $238,000 by 15 downtown merchants as a result of the walkout by city police last Oct. 7.

Man Gets Five Years After Death Threat And Holdup Melee

Andrew P. Matwick, 27, of 777 Fort, was sentenced today to five years in prison after he threatened a downtown store clerk with death before fleeing with $364 Thursday night.

Matwick, who pleaded guilty to robbery before Judge William Ostler, was chased and caught by two employees of Eaton's store shortly after he ran from the building with the money in a paper bag.

Police testified the accused approached Mrs. Mary E. Carey, 1381 Pandora, a cashier in the stationery department at 7:50 p.m. and handed her a note that read: "This is a holdup. Give me all the money or I will kill you."

The accused had his hand in his pocket giving the impression he had a gun.

Mrs. Carey stalled for time but was told by Matwick to hurry up and she was given a bag by the accused for the money.

Matwick ran from the store with the bag after Mrs. Carey screamed. Employees Bohdan Hryb, 17, of 639 Foul Bay, and Tarjei Andersen, 896 Violet, chased him down View, along Government and up up Fort to Broad where they caught him and held him for police.

"I do not have a gun—I wish to hell I did," Matwick told police when he was caught.

Ostler asked the accused if he had any explanation for the robbery and Matwick answered he got "fed up, I guess."

Matwick had a record of convictions including breaking and entering and theft, possession of stolen property, theft, and attempted breaking and entering.

The chase during crowded late-night shopping caused a commotion, and one woman with an unbrella watching the struggle thought the clerks were thugs beating up an innocent man.

"It appeared she was going to attack with her umbrella," said one store employee.

Hryb, a member of the B.C. amateur wrestling team who also broke the Victoria track record in the 440, brought Matwick down.

Business 'Pays' Says Haddock

A convention centre will be built in Victoria as soon as the tourist industry organizes itself and is ready to support the project, Mayor Courtney Haddock said Thursday.

He was optimistic that all segments of the industry will soon support the project.

"I'm in favor of a convention centre, but it must be financed entirely by the industry," he said. "Homeowners should not have to pay for it."

(Hotel and motel associations have already rejected a proposal that they collect a room tax to be used to finance the centre.)

The mayor's comments followed a suggestion by Ron B. Worley, deputy minister of travel industry, that the city get cracking on building a centre.

"The need for a centre in Victoria is so great, it's literally amazing to me that something in this respect hasn't yet been done," he stated.

He was speaking on tourist promotion at the Victoria Rotary Club luncheon in the Empress Hotel.

"There are millions of dollars waiting to be spent, just anywhere, where there's a convention centre located."

* * *

He said Penticton is attracting more tourist convention dollars than Victoria because it has a large centre.

Penticton, last year, was host to 33 conventions worth $3.11 million, neary two-and-a-half times as much as Victoria, he said.

Victoria had 45 conventions, with a value to the community of $1.41 million.

He said Penticton was able to draw larger conventions because of its 2,000 seat Peach Bowl.

He cited the convention of the World Wide Church of God which has its headquarters in Pasadena, Calif.

"A total of 7,300 delegates, including 2,400 children turned up for the convention," he said.

He said the church has booked Penticton's convention facilities for the next four years. Tentative bookings have been made for 1974 and 1977.

"It is a travesty that Victoria, with all the things it has to offer the tourist, hasn't got a convention centre," he said.

Driving Offences Take 30% Jump

Safety requires the co-operation of everyone, a traffic safety forum was told Thursday night by Ray Hadfield, superintendent of the B.C. motor vehicles branch.

This co-operation is needed to combat the 30 per cent increase of driving offences in Victoria alone over 1969.

And it is needed to educate drivers under 25 years of age who comprise 20 per cent of the driving population, 40 per cent of the motor vehicle accidents and in turn account for 50 per cent of traffic injuries.

IT WORKS

Hadfield read the speech of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who was to address the forum at Newcombe Auditorium but was unable to because of last-minute legislative duties.

The address pointed out the effectiveness of the amendments to the Canadian Criminal Code making it compulsory for a driver to give a breath sample when asked by a police officer.

It said the over-.08-per-cent-blood-alcohol-content law proved to be an "excellent deterrent" over the Christmas and New Year holidays.

Both Victoria and Saanich were presented with certificates of merit for maintaining fatality-free Safe Driving Weeks last Dec. 1 to Dec. 7.

Savage to Back Mayor On Tourist Fund Review

Ald. Clyde Savage said today he will back Mayor Courtney Haddock's push for a complete review of expenditures used for tourist promotion.

But, he said today, he will strongly oppose any move to reduce the present $60,000-a-year city grant to the Victoria Visitors Bureau.

"And I'm not contradicting myself," Savage said. "The $60,000 we grant the bureaus in my opinion well spent. I think that's been well established over the years by the rapid growth of the number of tourists coming here.'"

He added that: "There may well be too many organizations trying to do the same thing."

Savage said he would like to see his proposal for a hotel room tax discussed again soon.

When he suggested the tax last year, with the blessings of Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, hotel and motel owners in Greater Victoria rejected the proposal.

Savage said that "one day these people are going to have to accept the tax."

Haddock was equally sure Victoria hotel and motel operators soon will willingly impose a room tax if they want more facilities for visitors.

•

"It has always been my contention that the user should pay for the facility he wants," Haddock said.

"I have paid as high as 21 per cent in room tax in Rome, and didn't object. All the people there are saying is 'if we provide the tourist with amenities, then the tourist must pay for them.'

"It would be the same in Victoria. The hotel, motel and tourist oriented people want money for publicity and for a convention centre, then let them raise the funds.

"It certainly doesn't seem fair to me that the homeowner should be expected to pick up the tab."

Both Haddock and Savage noted that Honolulu Mayor Frank F. Fasi two weeks ago recommended a 10-per-cent room tax for all hotels in Hawaii.

Fasi said the revenues generated would be used for pollution control as well as tourist promotion.

Savage said he thinks a five-per-cent room tax is quite reasonable, would be accepted by our visitors and would generate the funds required to provide the Visitor's Bureau with more than $60,000 a year for promotion as well as provide the cash to build and operate a convention centre.

Bishop Vote Starts Behind Pink Ribbons

Christ Church Cathedral closed its doors to the public today as 53 clergy and 149 lay delegates began voting for a new Anglican Bishop of Vancouver Island.

Doors leading into the cathedral sanctuary were tied with pink ribbon and only accredited delegates, from every parish on the Island, were admitted.

Voting is expected to continue until later afternoon.

Ballots are being cast separately on each of the seven clergymen nominated and the successful candidate must have a two-thirds' majority on two separate votes — the vote of the clergy and the vote of the laity.

Ballot papers were issued at 10:30 this morning after Archbishop Godfrey Gower of New Westminster, metropolitan of the Anglican Church in British Columbia, had pronounced a blessing on the proceedings.

He asked that the voters be "guided by the Holy Spirit" in their choice of a successor to Bishop John Ogle Anderson, who died last November after only four months in office.

"The system of voting may be cumbersome," the archbishop told a Times reporter, "but it ensures that the chosen candidate has a majority support of both clergy and laymen."

Gower said the system is peculiar to the diocese of Vancouver Island and might conceivably be changed in the future.

There is a definite movement toward simplification and unification of Anglican procedures across Canada."

The archbishop celebrated holy communion in the cathedral at 8 a.m. when members of the public were admitted.

Three Victoria clergymen are among the seven nominees — Dean Brian Whitlow, administrator of the diocese and dean of the cathedral; Ven. Hywel Jones, rector of St. Mary's Church Oak Bay, and Rev. H. Gordon Walker, rector of St. David's Cordova Bay.

Call Sounded For Former Yukoners

Can the call of the wild pierce the dense foliage of the city of gardens?

Victoria Chamber of Commerce hopes it can, and will, encourage ex-Yukoners to rally round Commissioner of the Yukon Jim Smith when he addresses a general membership meeting at lunch in the Empress Hotel Wednesday.

As many as possible have been urged to reserve a place by contacting the chamber office, ensuring that they will hear Smith's message, Snould the Youkon Take Over B.C.?

It is hoped a substantial number of MLAs, who have been exposed to the other side of the question—Should B.C. Take Over the North?—will be on hand.

A week later, at 7:30 p.m. in Newcombe Auditorium, the chamber is sponsoring a panel and public participation on the subject of the federal taxation White Paper.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you tell me which are the five largest airports in the world?—D.D.

A. Statistics available locally list only the largest, which is Dulles International Airport in Washington, D.C. The National Aeronautical Association would probably be able to supply the information you need. Its address is 806 15th Street N.W., Washington, D.C., 20005.

Saanich to Ponder Million-Dollar List

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council will sit down Monday night to consider a multi-million-dollar shopping list for capital projects for the coming five years.

Items contained in the preliminary list drawn up by department heads are not being made public and the council meeting is expected to be closed.

Local municipalities in British Columbia are required by the Municipal Act to prepare five-year capital budgets. This is not the same as a referendum, although some items could be subject to a referendum.

A five-year capital budget referendum in Victoria city totalling $8.5 million was defeated by voters last June.

★

In 1968, the Municipal Act was changed to require councils, on or before May 15 in each year, to prepare and adopt a five-year capital expenditure program bylaw showing estimates of the proposed source and application for funds for capital purposes for each year of the program.

In 1969, the act was amended to state that the program adopted remains in effect until a new program is adopted the following year.

Essentially, decisions made by council each year at regular budget time as well as individual referendums are supplemented by five-year planning, but open to annual revision.

This is the first time Saanich has drawn up this kind of a program under the new legislation, although a capital projects referendum was approved by voters in 1965.

A start on the first draft of a capital expenditure program was made during 1969 but was not put into final form for presentation to council.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said today the Saanich five-year budget is still not in final form and council will be having its first look at "what is essentially a shopping list" Monday night.

"It has not been subject to any cuts and some of the items will just never get off the ground," he said.

It will be his recommendation that the meeting be closed to the public.

"The fact is that it is a staff report to council and I want council to feel free to react quite freely," he said.

Curtis also said it is not his intention to have a series of closed meetings.

"We will not keep it under wraps until all the decisions are made and say, here's the list," he said.

"This meeting and possibly the second will be closed."

Asked if the decisions will be made by that time anyway, he said "I doubt it very much."

The five-year budget, when it is decided, will serve as a general guideline for Saanich during this period.

★

It was disclosed last month that the municipal affairs department has registered concern at the lack of such a budget in Saanich and that there will be no further approval for borrowing money until the budget is completed and filed with the provincial government.

The budget will reflect all capital items — those requiring borrowing and referendums; sewers and waterworks, which do not require referendums unless a sufficient petition is received; and items generally financed from current revenue and requiring no borrowing.

Whalebone Corsets Will Never Return

By PENNY SAVER

"Mom, what's it like to wear a whalebone corset?"

"Ask your grandmother or Mathilda," I replied with a miffed sniff. "I'm much too young to know about such things.

"Mathilda doesn't wear corsets," interjected my younger daughter from the corner easy chair. "She says her body's been pinched and squeezed for so many years that it deserved a chance to do what it wants to."

"In that case," I said to my elder daughter, "Mathilda should be able to tell you what you want to know. But what made you think of whalebone corsets?"

"I was trying on my new bra-slip and suddenly realized how much women's underwear has changed. Even in the few years I've had to worry about underpinnings things have been steamlined. And I can't imagine turning back!

"Even the shapes have changed. The line is softer.

"For example, just a few months ago a girl with a figure like mine had to search for a bra that didn't have 'a sixteenth of an inch of shaping.'

"Bra-slips were particularly bad, which is why I waited til now to buy one.

"But I did find one today. It is mini-length with a tidy bit of embroidery trim in a cling proof fabric and the natural shade that is everywhere right now.

"The straps are very, very slender and, both stretch and adjust; the cut is very low. But the best part is that the bra section is shaped from a single, unseamed piece of very light weight elastic nylon. It shapes very nicely and is very comfortable.

It cost me $10, which, these days, isn't bad at all.

"And remember the complaint you and your friends made last year about body stockings? . . . that they had no 'escape hatch'?

"Well, every body stocking I saw today had an excellent one, most being fastened with hooks and eyes."

My daughter went on to describe the various body stockings she saw.

One for $4 is shaped by full length seams from a slightly elastic fabric. The straps are elastic and adjustable and there is a bit of elastic at the leg. There is no padding at all and she said the whole thing looked terribly light and comfortable.

Again it was in a natural shade and had tiny hooks to take detatchable garters for those who still wear stockings instead of panty hose.

For $9 she saw another much like it in an ecru shade with a bit more of a cup and more control for a larger figure.

At $10 there was a body stocking that wasn't designed to cling to the body.

Instead of being made of an all elastic fabric, she explained, it was made of the same kind of nylon as a slip. This, it seems, is designed for wearing under pant suits.

"You know, Mom, you wear four or five separate pieces of underwear," she concluded. "If you were really smart you'd cut that down to just two, and not sacrifice one bit of modesty in doing it!"

If you would like to know where my daughter shopped, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

High-Rise Fireplace Forms Partial Wall

Even traditional designs have forsworn the idea of houses as a series of boxes. With central heating, insulation and double glazing for windows and sliding glass doors, interior climate control is well in hand, so that rooms and walls can be arranged to the benefit of good living rather than just creature comfort.

The relatively small house, by architect Edward H. Fickett, F.A.I.D., shown here, seems spacious because the rooms flow together, yet each has its own entity. Key to the whole plan is the handsome fireplace that stretches upward through the second story, functioning as a partial wall for the rooms above, and partially separating them from each other. It also serves the same purpose on the lower floor, marking the division between dining room, living room and kitchen, without blocking off the rooms completely.

Styled as it is, the fireplace opening could be a solid black space, without the hearth, and the structure would be a stunning design element in the room. The combination of smooth white plaster and natural colored, textured concrete blocks works a fine study in contrasts in a rigid geometric pattern.

The living room is two storeys high, sharing the ceiling with the two mezzanine rooms. This also, contributes greatly to the spacious feeling of the house, and keeps the room in scale with the dramatic fireplace.

Vancouver Designer Builds Own Business

VANCOUVER (CP) — When Simone Nashman arrived here from Toronto 18 months ago, she couldn't get employment as a dress designer. So she created her own job.

She started designing and cutting out dresses on the floor of the $85-a-month apartment she shared with two others.

"I used to go out selling by bus, carrying as many dresses as I could," she says. "I'd put them into shops on consignment."

Today, the buyers come to her. The shop that bears her name is turning out 300 dresses a month.

Her equal partner in the project is Dave Madiuk, 27, who has his own construction company. He joined her after coming to the 22-year-old designer's shop to do alterations.

Her original partner had dropped out and Mr. Madiuk felt the project had potential.

"It's getting to the point where I like this business more than construction," he says.

The average Simone dress—"We couldn't even afford to put labels on the dresses at first"— costs about $30.

HAS OWN STYLE

In addition to a full-time staff of one, Simone has another 15 seamstresses working in their homes. Mr. Madiuk says he expects production to double by April.

Simone says her designs are "my own style," rejecting strict classifications. She produces only four dresses from each design.

"We want to supply mainly the specialty shops," she says. "We want to encourage people to shop in these places.

"We really feel we can do something to change styles in Vancouver, to make people more aware of and interested in high fashion."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Peek-a-Boo Problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now that Alvin is retired, he's at home all day, but that's not my problem.

There is a young woman who rents the apartment directly across the hall from us, and her claim to fame is that she is 44-34-42 — or something like that. Anyway, last Sunday when Miss 44 was getting her morning paper, the wind blew her door shut and locked her out. All she had on was one of those shorty see-through peek-a-boo nighties.

Well, Miss 44 rang our doorbell, and when poor Alvin opened the door and saw her standing there like that he was so embarrassed he didn't know what to do, so he yelled for me to get the caretaker while he stood there talking to her.

Now, Abby, there are two old maid sisters living in the apartment right next to hers. Why didn't she ring their bell?

I get so nervous thinking this might happen again I can't sleep at night. What do you suggest?—Alvin's wife.

DEAR WIFE: I suggest you forget it. Your locked-out neighbor was probably more embarrassed than Alvin. And it's not likely to happen again.

DEAR ABBY: My dearest friend whom I love very, very much is addicted to diet pills and sleeping pills. She goes to two different doctors and gets prescriptions from each. One doctor doesn't know about the other. This has been going on for years, and now she has found still a third doctor who doesn't know about the other two.

We have had long talks, and this woman confides in me. I have begged her to tell her family doctor what she's doing, but she refuses.

I am very worried about her, Abby. She used to be groggy all morning, and now it's mid-afternoon before she can shake herself out of the fog.

Do you think I would be justified in calling her doctor and telling him what I know? If you say so I will call him immediately.

By the way, this woman's husband can't be too sharp because he doesn't know she is on pills. She has two young children and is such a wonderful person, I hate to see what she is doing to herself. Please advise me. Nameless Friend.

DEAR FRIEND: Tell your friend that you will give her three days in which to tell her doctor, and if she doesn't tell him, you will tell him, because you love her too much to stand idly by and watch her destroy herself. In this way, you'll be giving her a chance to save her face. I'll bet she tells her doctor.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the benefit of DISGUSTED SISTER who wondered why her brother Gordy left a beautiful 36-year-old wife for an "old wrinkled grandmother of 50."

I happen to be married to a "young, unwrinkled grandmother of 50," and I couldn't be happier. This little grandmother is warm and affectionate and full of love. She has never said, "Not now—you'll muss my hair!" And when I am in a loving mood, she'll never say, "Is that all you ever think of?"

No man wants to be married to an untouchable goddess. — Fifty - Year - Old Grandpa

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Recently, I purchased some wool crepe, and after preshrinking it (by wrapping in a wet sheet) I found it had shrunk considerably. The fabric was full of ripples that were impossible to press out. Please tell me how to treat this kind of material to prevent shrinkage in the finished garment. Also, how do you remove the wrinkled effect? — Mrs. E.I.

Dear Mrs. E.I.:

You made your first mistake when you tried to shrink your fabric the way you did. It is very seldom that you will buy fabric that isn't already shrunk unless someone has brought it back as a gift from a foreign country.

Any fabric that is subjected to as much moisture as you have placed on yours will shrink and continue to shrink. This is not the normal amount of shrinkage you would have encountered in construction of your garment or in normal dry cleaning.

Hopefully, you have a good dry-cleaner near your home and you can have the entire piece of fabric professionally pressed and begin all over again.

After this, be sure to press construction seams with your steam iron or else use one of the chemically treated press cloths that will give you the hot steam you need but not make your fabric too wet.

Mrs. Farmer's booklet, "Your Pattern and You," will assist you in fitting your new garment with tailor-made precision. Send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Chapter Adds New Members

Mrs. V. H. V. Shepperd put on her municipal regent's hat Wednesday evening to install a new member into her own primary IODE chapter.

The ceremony that made Mrs. Jean Overguard a member of the Royal Roads chapter was slipped between the banquet held at the Strathcona Hotel and the opening of the annual meeting.

Her installation brought to three the number of new members installed into Royal Roads chapter since the 1969 annual meeting.

Mrs. Overguard joins Miss G. S. Rae and Mrs. B. Esau, who transferred from the Edmonton IODE where she was a charter member, life member and honorary regent of two primary chapters.

Membership convener Mrs. C. Ç. Riach reported the chapter has two life members.

During the past year Royal Roads chapter raised $1,597 and spent $1,588, leaving them with a profit of $9, reported treasurer, Miss A. Norell.

Of the receipts almost $200 was raised through the sale of cards by Mrs. David Low.

Mrs. J. C. F. Blowey, services at home and abroad, and Miss Helen Rattray, education and commonwealth, both reported over $500 in disbursements.

Mrs. Blowey reported that as well as the regular yearly expenditures for Christmas hampers, health supplies, and so forth, the chapter gave $50 to assist a father taking his daughter to Seattle for special hospital treatment.

Miss Rattray reported on the visit of the Kleena Kleene students to Victoria and the communication with the chapter's other adopted school in Labrador.

She also reported on the tea for chapter members given by three-year bursary winner Linda Burkholder and told the chapter that the ballet bursary winner, Madeline Pinoch is still studying in London.

Also submitting reports were Mrs. L. G. Easton, Echoes; Mrs. B. Bechta, public relations; Mrs. George Bennett, secretary and immigration for Eleanor Hill who was absent and Mrs. H. I. Trahan, standard bearer, a post she has held for 24 years.

On the new executive are: Mrs. S. K. Hayward, regent for the second year; Mrs. E. Hill, vice-regent; Mrs. M. G. Gourlay, second vice-regent; Mrs. G. Bennett, secretary; Mrs. B. T. Shaw, treasurer, Mrs. J. C. F. Blowey, services at home and abroad; Miss Helen Rattray, education and commonwealth; Mrs. I. Trahan, standard bearer; Mrs. L. G. Easton, Echoes; Mrs. C. C. Riach, membership; Mrs. B. Bechta, public relations; Mrs. William Esau, assisted by Mrs. M. Zabel, immigration and world affairs; Mrs. H. Brubacher, hostess and Mrs. W. Cuthbertson, Mrs. Esau and Mrs. M. Angus, councillors.

McMicking Chapter Installs Executive

Mrs. R. R. Jeffels was installed as regent of Robert Burns McMicking Chapter, IODE at its annual meeting held recently.

Mrs. V. H. V. Shepperd, regent of Municipal Chapter, IODE, was the installing officer.

Officers on the 1970 executive are Kay Robson, first vice regent; Miss Laura Tebo, second vice-regent; Miss Molly Edgar, secretary; Miss Mary-Lynn Anderson, assistant secretary; Eileen Napper, treasurer; Eleanor Hendy, Echoes secretary; Violet Edward, services at home and abroad; Rosemary Pollard, education secretary, Myra Balango, membership; Miss Muriel Pottinger, standard bearer; Miss Pearl Barbour, citizenship, and Hilda McFarlane, projects for the blind.

Councillors for 1970 are Edna Fox, Ada Heald, Ida Major, Edna Stock, Miss Kay Shaw, Miss Agnes Stewart, Alice Nicklin and Miss Mary Moresby.

Out-going education secretary Maude Church reported that her committee spent a total of $820.31 on education in 1969. This was a drop of more than $240 from the previous year, she pointed out.

Donations were made to Pender Island School, James Bay Elementary and Antigua Girls' High School. The Dulcie Fowler Memorial award of $100 was won by Bill Dyson for his accomplishment in the Greater Victoria Music Festival.

Bursaries were also awarded to three students for a total of $300, and $137 was voted to the Municipal Scholarship.

Violet Edward, secretary for services at home and abroad, reported that expenditures for 1969 were $1049.50 with funds going to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, George Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, Biafra Relief Fund and other programs.

Conferring with Dr. K. I. G. Benson, assistant provincial health officer of the provincial health branch, is Miss Rabiab Punthupeng of Thailand. She is in Canada on a Colombo Plan scholarship to study administration methods of provincial public health services. (Photo by Maureen Duffus)

Midwifery Is a Required Course For Thailand's Student Nurses

When she returns to Thailand, Miss Rabiab Punthupeng will be chief of the health section of the Tai Red Cross, and her duties will include administering 11 Red Cross health units across the country, training of staff and student nurses.

To help prepare for the post, she has come to Canada on a Colombo Plan scholarship to study administration methods of provincial public health services in order to adapt Canadian procedure to Thailand's needs.

She was in Victoria Thursday to confer with officials of the public health branch.

Red Cross health centers in Thailand provide services very similar to those supplied by B.C. public health services, whose methods she is studying, and the VON, Miss Punthupeng explained.

In addition, the Red Cross has it own hospital in Bangkok.

"Our nurses are trained at Chulalongkorn Hospital for a three-year general program, then may specialize in any of the services we provide. These include mother and child care, medical treatment, preventive medicine and home visits.

"Also each nurse must take a course in midwifery, because many people living far from the cities prefer to have their babies at home."

Miss Punthupeng is a graduate of the Tai Red Cross School of Nursing, and also has her diploma in nursing service administration from the College of Nursing of Australia.

The Colomba plan administration asked for three months to be spent mainly in one health unit, so Miss Punthupeng has been assigned to the Central Vancouver Island Health unit at Nanaimo for most of her stay in B.C.

In addition she will visit other public health units on tours arranged by Monica Green, director of public health nursing of the provincial health office.

IN BRITAIN

Equal Pay Bill Introduced

LONDON — British women won a long-sought victory recently when the government introduced legislation requiring equal pay for equal work by the end of 1975. Employers protested that their wage bill would be swollen by 5 per cent, or $2.4 billion.

Barbara Castle, Minister for Employment and Productivity, said upon introducing the bill in the House of Commons, "This is an historic day for Britain and one of particular satisfaction for me." The bill is expected to pass in the current parliamentary session.

Mrs. Castle is credited by many with having influenced her cabinet colleagues to act. The equal pay issue has been debated since the 19th century.

Many other barriers against British women have been falling recently.

Lloyd's of London, the once all-male insurance underwriting society, has accepted 46 women as members. The Royal Microscopical Society has recently elected its first woman president, and the first woman has been appointed Lord High Commissioner of the Church of Scotland, representing the sovereign at the general assembly.

Restrictions remain, however, and to combat these Joyce Butler, a Labor Member of Parliament, has drawn up an anti-discrimination bill for public facilities.

Mrs. Butler has personally assailed two male redoubts — El Vino, a Fleet Street haunt of lawyers and journalists, where women are not permitted to stand and drink at the bar, and Simpsons-in-the-Strand, beloved by tourists for roast beef, where the ground floor restaurant is open only to men at lunchtime.

The London Stock Exchange still refuses women memberships.

However, the Equal Pay Bill is regarded as far more important than dismantling social barriers. The bill requires employers to give equal treatment where men and women are engaged on the same or similar work in the same establishment.

Pay equality is to be achieved by Dec. 29, 1975. After then, any woman who alleges discrimination will be able to go before an industrial board and seek two years back pay and damages as well. The Government would also be empowered to order a certain measure of progress by the end of 1973.

Women's rates in British industry have ranged from 65 per cent to 95 per cent of male rates for the same job. A machine fitter (male) in the electrical engineering industry draws a base rate of $36 a week, while his female counterpart at the next machine draws $26, or 72 per cent of the male rate.

However, even with identical rates imposed, male earnings could still outstrip female earnings because of the legal limitations imposed on female overtime, shift work and night work. Mrs. Castle said these limitations would continue. Still, the achievement of rate parity will mean a substantial increase in family incomes and in purchasing power.

Britain has about 9 million working women, making up 35 per cent of the total working population. About 56 per cent of these women are married. More than half earn less than $24 a week and only one in 30 earns the average male wage.

Demography Drives Women Onto Roads

CHICAGO (UPI) — Women drivers may outnumber male motorists sometime during the 1970s.

The statistical rates, Robo-Wash Market Research said recently, promise greater percentage increases in female drivers over male and more demographic and ecological reasons to spur the change.

U.S. Bureau of Public Roads reports back up the forecast. These show female driver registrations in the past three years have been increasing annually by from three to six per cent, whereas male registrations have been up only 1.3 to 1.9 per cent.

Two-car families, with the little woman taking to the road in her own vehicle, also will play a part, Robo-Wash said.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH this evening is The Flim-Flam Man, at 8 on Channel 8. George C. Scott stars as Mordecai Jones, an aging con man who joins forces with an AWOL soldier to cheat cheaters. Highlight is a slapstick auto chase that almost wrecks an entire town. The movie is repeated at midnight on Channel 6.

LAUGH-IN. 8, Channels 2 and 6. Carl Reiner is the guest star tonight, doing a toupee commercial and helping out with a Russian version of Laugh-In.

ROAD SHOW FANS, take note — at 11 p.m. on Channel 12, Hope and Crosby tangle with native girls and money, in Road to Zanzibar.

GET SMART. 7:30, Channel 7. Max Smart does such a poor job of protecting a KAOS defector tonight, he destroys an ace assassin, unprepared for such incompetence. Smart uses his talent for working against his best intentions to the utmost here, but since the story idea depends mainly on the assassin's reactions, he's the key to the tale, not Adams.

THE HIGH CHAPARRAL. 7:30, Channel 5. "The Guns of Johnny Rondo." Steve Forrest stars as an ex-gunfighter who refuses to carry a gun and insists that his 17-year-old son (Kurt Russell), who knows nothing of his father's history, do likewise. The story is particularly suited to the High Chaparral format, because both father and son find friends there who can appreciate and understand the conflict involved. The resolution may be standard for the series but appropriate and satisfying nonetheless.

TIM CONWAY SHOW. 8, Channel 7. Slapstick in the air. The crisis aboard the Triple A Airline takes place behind the cockpit once again. Conway tries to keep a postal inspector, on board for a test flight, from learning about a baby passenger, and there's a lot of frantic byplay — foolishness with a bassinet. The new series intends to keep the comedy level as close to basic Laurel and Hardy as possible, and Conway consistently destroys everything around him.

HALLMARK HALL OF FAME. 8:30, Channel 5. "A Storm in Summer." Two superb characterizations — Peter Ustinov as a misanthropic Jewish grocer, and N'Gai Dixon as a black ghetto child who distrusts whites — are written into a contrived situation by Rod Serling. Even though there are many more things wrong with this drma than right, we can promise most viewers a good, sentimental cry at the finale. The grocer unwillingly becomes the child's companion as a result of a mix-up by a charity that arranges country vacations for disadvantaged children. Almost every scene and every event is predictable, but Ustinov is a treat and seeing the young actor hold his own with him is also theatrically exciting.

THE GHOST AND MRS. MUIR. 8:30, Channel 4. "Dig for the Truth." Pleasant yarn makes good use of the series' setting of Schooner Bay. Mrs. Muir is writing an article in conjunction with the old school's upcoming 200th anniversary, and some facts are unearthed which set the town council a-spinning. Naturally, the Captain is behind it all and he stands by as the dispute about the school's rightful founder rages. A funny finale finds Claymore literally "digging for the truth" at the old school site.

WINSOME REGULAR Karen Jensen has a featured role in tonight's episode of Bracken's World, at 10 on Channel 5.

SPECIAL. 10, Channel 7, 12. "LBJ: The Decision to Halt the Bombing." This is the second in a series of conversations between former President Lyndon B. Johnson and CBS correspondent Walter Cronkite. Again speaking in the informal atmosphere of the LBJ Ranch in Texas, Mr. Johnson focuses on the events leading up to and the issues ivolved in his decision to halt the bombing in North Vietnam back in 1968. In the process, Mr. Johnson reviews the impact and results of the Tet offensive on the progress of the war and on American opinion and he discusses the various roles played by figures like Dean Rusk, Clark Clifford, Arthur Goldberg and Dean Acheson in the making of his decision.

160,000 Miss Paper In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun, involved in a contract dispute with its employees since last fall, was forced to curtail publication Thursday.

The evening newspaper was able to run off only one of three regular editions and missed most subscribers in the Greater Vancouver area.

Managing Editor William T. Galt said some 100,000 copies out of a normal Thursday run of 260,000 papers were produced and delivered.

The newspaper bought time on Vancouver radio stations to warn subscribers there would be no paper Thursday night, blaming a production slowdown for the development.

Galt said The Sun decided to cancel its home and final editions after the press run fell hours behind schedule.

CLEAR PRESSES

He said there was a limit to the length of time carrier boys could be kept waiting and that Pacific Press Ltd. had to clear printing and press facilities for The Province.

Pacific Press produces The Sun and the morning Province.

Both The Sun and The Province have been periodically late reaching subscribers due to production difficulties.

Negotiations have been at a standstill for weeks in the dispute between five newspaper unions and Pacific Press.

The dispute involves the Vancouver and New Westminster Newspaper Guild, representing about 650 editorial, office and maintenance employees, and another 600 employees who are members of the Typographical, stereo, press and mailers unions.

KEY ISSUE

Earlier negotiations broke down over the period to be covered by a new contract. The unions sought a 24-month pact expiring Oct. 31, 1971, while the company offered a wage package of 82 cents an hour in a 25-month agrement.

A company spokesman said the newspapers wanted a 25-month contract in order that they could "look forward to uninterrupted production during the pre-Christmas period."

The company offer would increase the salary of a senior reporter to $208 a week in the 13th month of the proposed contract, compared with the minimum rate of $177 under the contract which expired Oct. 31.

Last November members of the guild voted 68.8 per cent in favor of strike action. The other unions involved in the dispute have not held strike votes.

Co-Pilot Almost Took to Air

MACON, Ga. (AP) — An airliner with 44 passengers aboard made an emergency landing here Tuesday night after the glass in a window of the pilot's cabin broke and the co-pilot was almost sucked through it.

The plane, a Delta Convair 440, landed safely. The co-pilot, J. L. Jones, was treated for cuts on his right arm.

Rape Trial Defendants Acquitted by Jury

Two men accused of raping a 14-year-old girl were found not guilty and discharged by Victoria assize court Thursday night.

An all-male jury of 12 deliberated its verdict for more than five hours before returning a not guilty verdict at 11:05 p.m.

"I hope you will let this be a lesson to you," Mr. Justice David Verchere told William Harvey Hollinger, 22, of Duncan, and Michael Derek Newstead, 17, of 482 Burnside East, just before they left the prisoner's dock after the six-day trial.

●

They had been jointly charged with raping the girl in a secluded area near Interurban Road late Nov. 11 and early Nov. 12 last year.

Defence counsel Brian Roberts for Hollinger and Ronald F. Barber for Newstead argued that the girl consented to having intercourse with the two accused.

Defence counsel Roberts told the jury the testimony of the girl was unreliable.

"She has the emotions of a child and the body of a woman," he said. "Children live largely in a world of fantasy and they sometimes have difficulty distinguishing between fact and fancy."

Roberts said the girl had lots of opportunity to run away from the two accused had she wished.

Barber said the main issue in the trial was whether the girl consented to sexual intercourse or not.

He said it was significant that, after having intercourse in the back seat of the car, she sat between the two accused in the front.

Barber said a medical examination afterwards showed no welts, bruises or scratches on the girl's body, such as might be expected if she had been forcibly raped.

Newstead, the younger of the two accused, was the final witness for the defence.

He said he was picked up by police around 3 a.m. on Nov. 14 and taken to Saanich police station. There four hours, he made a statement to Detective George Walton, but he was tired and "hung over" and did not intend to say some of the things in the statement.

●

Under cross-examination by crown counsel J. W. Anderson, Newstead told how he and Hollinger met the girl at the Children's Aid Society group home on Carey Road and offered to drive her home.

On the way they stooped at a place near the Interurban Road. He produced some beer but the girl refused a drink.

A while later, Newstead said, the girl left the car and walked away. He went after her and asked what was the matter.

"I put my arm round her and we walked back to the car."

Newstead said he then had sexual intercourse with the girl and there was no protest. Later, outside his home on Burnside, he saw Hollinger and the girl in the back seat of the car.

Some time after that, he (Newstead) again had intercourse with her.

Nicholas Galitzine, a social worker at the group home on Carey Road, said the girl stayed there as an inmate and later as a visitor.

●

"I was appalled by her lackadaisical state," Galitzine said. "She seemed to be rejecting society and she had a devil-may-care attitude to everything."

Asked if the girl told the truth, he replied:

"I would be naive if I believed everything she said."

"In my opinion she was given to exaggeration," Galitzine said. "We like to trust everyone but I couldn't always believe her . . . she did a lot of play-acting."

Galitzine said Newstead, one of the accused, came to the Carey Road home for about three weeks.

"I found him every co-operative, responsive to discipline and ready to please. He was very loyal and would stand up for a friend in trouble.

Indians Dismiss Myth Of Equality in Law

MONTREAL (CP) — The white man's law was shot full of arrows Wednesday night by delegates attending a McGill University teach-in on the North American Indian.

Ron Grant, a Metis from Saskatchewan, told the story of Allen Thomas of the Salteaux reserve, trampled to death by a white mob on the night of May 13, 1963.

He said Thomas, 23, still recovering from tuberculosis, was too weak to run when the white men descended on an Indian encampment on the fair grounds of the prairie town of Glaslyn, Sask.

"Allen was still in his tent. They trampled him. They jumped up and down on him. They crushed his chest and crushed his skull.

"The police didn't come until the next morning. Allen was still alive, but they refused to take him to the hospital 45 miles away. They told an Indian to take him."

Allen Thomas died en route to hospital, and nine white men later were arrested by RCMP and charged with non-capital murder.

"I'll never forget the trial," Grant said. "I took off school to attend it. They made the Indians look like fools. Many couldn't speak English and there wasn't a proper interpreter.

So the white men got off."

Another delegate attending the three-day teach-in told the story of a young Indian girl, Rosemary Roper, whose bruised and violated body was found in a quarry near Williams Lake, B.C.

"It was about a year and a half ago," said Willie Dunn, Indian film-maker whose Ballad of Crowfoot was shown at the teach-in earlier.

Three men were arrested, but they had a lot of pull in the local town. The first charge was third-degree murder. Then it was reduced to manslaughter, then to common assault.

"You know what happened. They were fined. They were fined a total of $500.

"I remember the figure because a friend of mine, an Indian, was also fined $500 not too long after.

"He was fined $500 for killing a moose."

William Commanda, soft-spoken chief of 800 Algonquins at Maniwaki, Que., told of the shooting of 16-year-old Willie Mitchell by a Maniwaki constable a year ago.

On the night of Jan. 23, 1969, the constable ordered Willie and two of his friends, suspected of stealing light bulbs, to stop and be searched.

Willie ran, and the policeman fired. The bullet tore through his neck and cheek, but Willie recovered. The constable, who testified that he had tripped and fired his gun accidentally, was cleared of responsibility.

"Willie will never be the same," his mother said Wednesday night. "His neck was broken and all his teeth were smashed."

"You know what they did," said Commanda. "They promoted the constable. Now he swaggers around town with not one gun, but two. One on each hip."

Commanda said he is trying to have the case reopened.

HOME GARDEN

Time to Prepare Balcony Boxes

By HILDA BEASTALL

An apartment dweller with an outdoor balcony box or planter can begin gardening activities now, whether his taste runs to flowers or vegetables. If plants were grown there last year, get a bag of new soil, either from a friend's compost heap or a purchased product.

Hilda

You'll need enough to bring the level to within an inch of the rim after settling. A low surface level in pots or boxes causes seedlings to stretch their stems before opening first leaves.

An east facing balcony will be good for sowing a few dwarf peas or broad beans. Wouldn't it be fun to have a couple of dozen plants of either of these vegetables, and have enough pickings for a month or two?

Facing south you could perhaps sow carrots now, if you get a short rooted type like Chantenay; beets like sun too.

Garlic cloves, the separated pieces from a garlic bulb as you buy it at vegetable counters, will grow well in a planter, so will chives, shallots and regular large onions.

Being in a container the problem of ripening during August will not exist. When the bulbs are the right size, you just stop watering.

The soil should be well filled with humus for holding moisture in the warm growing period of spring and early summer.

A planter against a wall, facing south would be ideal for growing first, successive sowings of mustard and cress to perk up luncheon salads, then a few lettuce of the butterhead type and radishes, followed by three tomato plants.

On some balconies I have seen, it would be possible by the end of February to have a pot of tomato seed germinating.

Placed against the wall, the pot would hold a little warmth overnight, and benefit still further from having a whole newspaper section over it during the hours of darkness.

A cardboard carton would serve the same purpose and be less subject to wind disturbance.

Before installing a planter full of soil on an apartment balcony, a sensible precaution would be to have permission from the building management.

Not only is there the added weight of wet soil, but a certain amount of water run-off during spring and summer watering periods.

Remember that your planter may cause a problem to those below you, even as tenants above you would undoubtedly be the source of annoyance to you if water dripped to your level.

Cancer Mortality Rate Being Lowered

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

While we all wait for a complete cure of one or more types of cancer we should be encouraged by the fact that some cancer death-rates are being reduced markedly. For instance, in 1937, a tumor of the womb was the greatest cancer hazard for the American woman, but since then, thanks to the Pap test and improved methods of treatment, the death rate for womb cancer has been cut by more than half. Similarly, today if cancer of the breast is treated when found, and before it has spread, the survival rate can be as high as 83 per cent.

The American Cancer Society says that more than 1.5 million people are alive in the United States today who have been cured of cancer, and 1 in 3 now with cancer is being saved. In the 1930s, only 1 in 5 could be saved.

Ten years ago I had a cancer of the large bowel, and I am alive today because 1) I went for X-ray examination within a few days after I began to feel a stange pain in my abdomen, and 2) two days after the tumor was found I was in the hospital being made ready for the operation.

What is sad is that so commonly when I see a woman with a big lump in her breast and ask her. "When did you find this?" she says, "Ten months ago." When I ask her why she didn't go to her doctor immediately, she says, "I was so scared of what he might say I put it off." But because she wasted 10 precious months, she is likely to lose her life.

* * *

I read that Dr. Richard Lillehei, that very able surgeon of the University of Minnesota, together with his coworkers, is attempting to cure severe diabetes by transplanting the pancreas (a gland that, when functioning properly, produces insulin) along with a segment of duodenum (the small bowel into which the secretion from the pancreas drains). Dr. Lillehei says that as yet they haven't had people survive long enough to know how much help the transplanted pancreas will give to diabetics, (diabetes is caused by the failure of a part of the pancreas to produce sufficient insulin), but he has a felling that if the technique can be improved, in perhaps 5 years or so, one of the most requently performed organ transplantations will be that of the pancreas.

And it could bring joy and comfort and health to young diabetics. The diabetic who gets the disease after middle life has a milder form of the disease which can be controlled easily by diet and drugs that can by taken by mouth.

* * *

Just now we are hearing much about "the dangers of the pill." I was cheered to hear Prof. Robert Kistner of Harvard say that he knew of no valid evidence that the pill can produce cancer. Many men fear the female hormone that is in pills, forgetting that every woman's body contains female hormone until the menopause. Many men fear the pill will cause phlebitis (clotting of the blood in a vein), but studies in England showed that women on the pill had no more phlebitis than the average woman has.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Attacks Spurred Confederation

By BOB BOWMAN

Wednesday's story described one of the Canadian attacks on English settlements in what is now the U.S. that eventually led to the end of French colonization of North America.

Years later, U.S. attacks on British North American colonies led to the creation of the Dominion of Canada. One of the strong reasons for Confederation was the necessity to unite or be swallowed up by the Americans.

An American attack on Brockville, Ontario, on February 6, 1813, resulted in Canadians hitting back sharply later in the month. The American raid on Brockville, of course, was perfectly legal because it was during the War of 1812. The U.S. troops crossed the frozen St. Lawrence and took 52 citizens of Brockville back to Ogdensburg as hostages, as well as all the horses, cattle, pigs and poulty they could round up.

Major Macdonnell, commanding a detachment of the Glengarries at Prescott, wanted to rescue the prisoners at Ogdensburg but could not get permission from Governor Sir George Prevost. However, he led 480 men onto the ice on the pretext of performing an excercise with three pieces of artillery. The "exercise" suddenly became a full-scale attack and even though the troops were completely exposed they charged into Ogdensburg under heavy fire. There was a bloody battle, but the Canadians returned with 74 prisoners, 12 guns, 300 tents, and a large quantity of ammunition and food. There were more raids on the Prescott-Brockville sector during the rest of the war.

However, Prescott was attacked again in 1838, by the Brotherhood of Hunters, an American group who believed that Canadians wanted to be liberated from Britain. This attack was illegal. Its leaders were captured and hanged at Kingston, although young John A. Macdonald was their defence lawyer at the court-martial.

Other events on February 6:

1682 — LaSalle and Tonty arrived at Mississippi River.

1865 — Canadian parliament began on Confederation.

1872 — Sir John A. Macdonald sent money to Louis Reil secretly and urged him to leave Canada.

1952 — King George VI died at Sandringham.

1956 — British Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden addressed joint session of Senate and House of Commons at Ottawa.

Chicken pox topped the list of communicable diseases in January.

There were 41 cases of chicken pox, 21 of them within the Greater Victoria School District, reported the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

Twenty-nine cases of measles were reported and 22 cases of streptococcal sore throat and smaller numbers of other diseases.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair from 1914-1935, was one of the world's leading bridge personalities during the 1930s and '40s. He wrote "The Bridge Fiend" and other bridge works under the name of Arthur Loring Bruce.

An example of Crowninshield's ability can be observed in today's deal. He was sitting South. The deal arose in a rubber-bridge game in New York City's Cavendish Club, of which Crowninshield was president from 1935 until his death in 1947.

Opening lead: Five of ♢.

East put up the king of diamonds on the opening lead, and Crowninshield captured the trick with his ace. A heart was then led to dummy's king, after which the three of clubs was played. When East followed suit with the deuce, South inserted his eight-spot. As is apparent, the eight-spot won the trick.

From here in, Crowninshield had nothing to do except to cash his 10 tricks: six clubs, one diamond, two hearts, and one spade.

I have the feeling that a good many players, had they been sitting in Crowninshield's seat, would have gone down. At trick two, they would have laid down the king of clubs, and followed up by leading another club.

With the "bad" 4-1 club break being revealed, East could not be prevented from obtaining the lead with the jack of clubs (or the king of spades). And once East obtained the lead, a diamond return by him would enable West to cash four diamond tricks.

But Crowninshield realized immediately that if East ever got the lead, South's remaining J-2 of diamonds would be ambushed. To make sure that East would not obtain the lead, South got to dummy and finessed his eight of clubs. Even if the finesse had lost to West's (hypothetical) jack, South's remaining J-2 of diamonds would prevent West from cashing more than one diamond trick. And, had the finesse lost, South would have had nine sure tricks.

"Only statistics on the staff," replied her husband. "Ages and weights."

"The girls' ages?" Ann smiled. "You never got those."

Harry nodded. "But I did, although they'll stay secret. The men average 24 years, and the overall average is 33 years. The average weight is just 145 pounds, the men 175 pounds and the girls 135 pounds."

What was the average age of the girls?

SINGER'S FUTURE BRIGHT

Cash Series Opening Strong

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The return of country-folk singer Johnny Cash in a weekly ABC-TV series seems to have been an excellent decision all-around by the network.

Cash, a larger-than-life fellow who has been likened to John Wayne — and seems certain to have a movie career too — was a critical success with a summer series on ABC-TV last year, but his ratings weren't too hot.

The network nevertheless brought him back as a midseason replacement several weeks ago. And the national ratings indicate that his fine debut — with Arlo Guthrie, Bobbie Gentry and Jose Feliciano — finished a very strong 16th among all shows.

Among other things, he beat out a star-studded Friars Club tribute to Jack Benny on NBC-TV's "Kraft Music Hall," his head-on competition. The tribute to Benny, which included an appearance by Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, came in a strong 21st, so it was an added coup for Cash to win under the circumstances.

Detractors might claim that Cash had the novelty attraction of his debut going for him. But actually he had been exposed often on the network before, and his debut was more in the nature of a return. And, as for novelty attraction, Agnew's appearance on the Benny "roast" probably ranks higher because the vice-president turned up on such an entertainment entry after being involved in a continuing controversy with television.

Theatre Group Giving Hell

REGINA (CP) — It will be Hell this spring for Theatre Saskatchewan, a Regina stage company.

The company announced it will open in April with a show called Hell, in two parts.

The first part is George Bernard Shaw's Don Juan in Hell and the second is Jean-Paul Sartre's No Exit, set in hell.

Funk—Natural Musical Spice Says Canadian Solo Singer

TORONTO (CP) — Joe Mendelson, until recently lead singer with the McKenna Mendelson Mainline group, is launching himself as a solo singer specializing in "funky Canadian music."

"It's grittier and filthier than American music—more funky," he explains.

"Funkiness doesn't come to your music overnight; it can't be written or added. it's natural, musical spice."

Mendelson decided on the type of music he wanted to play back in 1955 after hearing a Jimmy Reed blues record.

"I knew right then this was the music I'd play. Blues I can feel and understand."

Among his earlier idols were Elvis Presley, Jerry Lee Lewis and Little Richard. But he forsook them when their music strayed from the blues tradition along more-commercial lines.

"Not that there's anything wrong with commercial music, but it wasn't my style any more."

Mendelson, now 25, developed his own style of Canadian blues while playing clubs, radio stations and TV shows in Calgary during the summer of 1964. It took him until the present time to perfect the style of "Canadian funk."

The McKenna Mendelson Mainline, a group he helped form, was achieving some success in Toronto near the end of 1968 and decided to strike out for England rather than the United States to further their fame.

"For the U.S. you need a special visa and a gun as well. Britain, I thought, was ripe like it's never been for our type of music.

"After we'd played every damn small-town pub in the country, we played all over England and Scotland. Five record companies were after us."

The group cut a record called Stink—"it sold out in Toronto over Christmas"—and then came back to Toronto. "And that's got to be the biggest mistake in my life."

By the fall of 1969 the band was beginning to make money but failing to communicate, Mendelson says. "The night I saw the band playing mechanically and thoughtlessly, with people walking out under my nose, I left too, right after the set. That was Dec. 23."

His next record album will be "a well-produced, well-played collection of Canadian filth." He intends to do the recording in London but may use some Canadian musicians. And after that a musical thing on a Canadian historical figure. "How about Laura and the cow?"

HAIR IS SHORN

Mendelson recently had his long hair shorn, partly to make it easier for him to find lodging for his family, partly because he feels long hair has become a sign of conformity.

Mendelson who used to sing in some of Yorkville's clubs now scorns the hippie section of Toronto. "Yorkville's become the centre of conformity . . . it was where a generation of artists and pot smokers did congregate. But when it became commercialized, Yorkville became the sheep pasture. . . ."

Mendelson, son of a Toronto lawyer, has also earned money in the past by making belts and decorating store windows. That's why some of the current crop in Yorkville bother him. Some of them beg for money.

"I never begged for bread, I always worked for it."

GODFREY DOING HIS PART

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Godfrey says he will do no more radio and television commercials for Axion, an enzyme laundry pre-soak, unless the manufacturer allows him to say on the air that it pollutes water.

A spokesman for the Colgate-Palmolive Co., makers of Axion, refused to comment on Godfrey's position.

Godfrey said he would continue to do the commercials if Colgate permitted him to say Axion is a pollutant and that the manufacturer is trying to make it pollution-free.

He said that when he agreed to make the commercial, Colgate told him Axion was neither a water pollutant nor a detergent.

"Now I find that it's not only a detergent but has more phosphates than any of the other detergents."

Final Rites Held For British Author

NEW YORK (CP) — The body of British-born journalist-author Terence Robertson was cremated here Thursday. Robertson, 49, died suddenly in a New York hotel last weekend.

Robertson, who spent several years in Canada beginning in 1956, was the author of The Shame and the Glory, a 1962 book which delved deeply into the Second World War Dieppe raid, criticizing its planners but praising the Canadians and others who carried out the operation.

He also published in 1964 a book praising former prime minister Lester B. Pearson's role in the 1956 Middle East crisis. This book was Crisis, The inside story of the Suez Conspiracy.

Surviving are his wife, Olgalita, and their six-year-old son, of Alexandria, Va.

POET DIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Louise Bogan, 72, one of the most distinguished poets and a well-known literary critic in the United States, died Wednesday. For more than 30 years she was poetry critic of the New Yorker magazine and also won almost every major poetry award. These included the Bollingen Prize in 1955 and two Guggenheim fellowships. From 1945 to 1946 she held the chair of poetry at the Library of Congress.

Tiger Free In Aircraft; Recaptured

LONDON (CP) — A 70-pound tiger broke free from its cage in an Air Canada freight plane Wednesday and roamed around inside the aircraft until recaptured with the aid of a tranquilizer.

The miniature hunt went on for about four hours after ground workers at London airport opened a door in the aircraft and found the young tiger on the loose.

They slammed the door shut again and sent out a call for the Royal Society for the Prevention of Curelty to Animals.

The plane, which carried no passengers, was taking six tigers from a pickup point in Frankfurt to a final destination in Edmonton.

SHOPLIFTING

Pensioner Sentenced To 30 Days

A 70-year-old pensioner was sentenced in court Thursday to one month in jail when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting.

William H. Sneddon, 550 Johnson, was apprehended Feb. 4 as he was leaving the Victoria Meat Market, 625 Johnson, with a 99-cent jar of ham hocks he had not paid for.

Judge William Ostler was told the accused had an extensive record of convictions dating back to 1923, including theft over $50, vagrancy and causing a disturbance.

"You are a persistent and unrepentant thief and you have been stealing for years," Ostler told Sneddon.

"According to the record it looks that way," the accused replied.

Sneddon said he lived on old age pension and a war veteran's pension.

The British Columbia Heart Fund's 1970 campaign was launched Wednesday night by Mrs. W. C. Woodward and Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, co-chairmen of the Heart Fund in Victoria.

The fund in British Columbia hopes to raise $435,000, of which the Island's share will be $40,000.

Highlights of the Wednesday working included presentation of a cheque from the employees of St. Joseph's Hospital to G. E. W. Hemmans, provincial chairman of the B.C. Heart Fund, an address by Dr. K. R. Thornton, director of labratories at Royal Jubliee Hospital, and a film dealing with heart research work.

'Terror Reign' In Mine Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five days before he was beaten at a rally, word was sent down from United Mine Workers headquarters "to discipline Jock Yablonski," a Senate group investigating the union has been told.

Joseph A. Yablonski Jr. told a Senate labor subcommittee Thursday that the beating at a union rally in Springfield, Ill., was one of the first indications of the "reign of terror" that enveloped his late father's campaign for the union presidency and still hunts his family and supporters.

"I now go to sleep at night with a loaded pistol under my pillow," he said.

Yablonski, who unsuccessfully challenged incumbent UMW President A. W. (Tony) Boyle in the union's Dec. 9 election, was found shot to death with his wife and daughter at their Clarksville, Pa., home Jan. 5.

The three men, Paul Eugene Gilly, Aubran Wayne Martin and Claude Edward Vealey, have been charged in a Pennsylvania court with murder in the Yablonski deaths.

A graduate of Saint Louis University, Missouri, and a Fulbright scholar, Father Sherburne has pursued doctoral studies in Buddhism in Tibet and India, where he met the Dalai Lama. 'Remove the Stigma of Welfare'

Mothers on welfare should receive payment by right and not under the stigma of welfare, a New Democratic Party member said in the legislature Thursday.

Leo Nimsick (NDP-Kootenay) directing his remarks across the house to Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi, said two classes of citizens are created by the fact a person on welfare would receive a monthly allowance of $150 while someone receiving benefits from the Workmen's Compensation Board would receive $200 under comparable circumstances.

"Let's make it one measurement for all people in that category," Nimsick said.

"Mothers with kids are in the same category as mothers widowed by industrial deaths and collecting WCB allowances. They should receive their payment by right — not under the stigma of welfare."

As the NDP member spoke, Gaglardi stood up and headed for the door.

"I've got a few more things to say to you, Mr. Minister," said Nimsick.

"Hurry, I've got people waiting for me," replied Gaglardi.

The opposition member continued his talk with the comment that the government could not, as proposed in the throne speech, change te name of the welfare department unless it was willing to change its social assistance policies.

"A rose by any other name is still a rose," he said.

The welfare minister chuckled, turned his back, and went out the door.

About an hour later the welfare minister returned to the legislative chamber while Nimsick still spoke.

"Are you still talking," Gaglardi shouted across the floor.

The NDP member also advised the government to take the toll off B.C. Ferries operating between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay.

He said the passenger service should be free because the ferry run is "part of the Queen's highway across the province."

HUMANS LOSE BOTTOM TEST

NUEATON, England (UPI) —A car seat company said it has produced a machine which is a substitute for the human bottom.

The machine bounces and wiggles, and according to the company, can test its car seats more effectively than the human equivalent.

'GREAT MONOPOLY' CAPER THIS WEEKEND

Some 360 pairs of fast-moving hands will be grabbing for millions of dollars Saturday in the sedate atmosphere of the Empress Hotel ballroom, and all the money will be counterfeit.

The Empress will be the scene of what is billed as the first Canadian Monopoly Championship.

And there, in person, will be the world's champion monopoly champion Karl Shafer of Detroit, says Peter Mortimer, spokesman for Christ Church Cathedral's youth group, which is sponsoring the championship.

Under way at 11 a.m., games will be played in foursomes under a time limit of 1½ hours. Boards and cash will be supplied.

Mortimer said there is room for 360 players, and entry forms are being supplied at the Empress reception desk and at the games sections of city department stores.

Jobs Not Ready

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian merchant seamen will have to wait a few years before applying for jobs sailing from Roberts Bank on coal freighters owned by the Kaiser Corporation. S. C. Knight, vice-president of United International Shipping Corp., a Kaiser subsidiary, said his company will not get its first ships until 1972.

PM Promises Action To End Dock Shutdown

Times News Services

British Columbia ports are at a standstill today as longshoremen picket for the second time in three months.

Prime Minister Trudeau has promised government action if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Picket lines were thrown up in Victoria late Thursday afternoon but no ships are at Ogden Point docks at present.

Dock workers in Vancouver and New Westminster began their walkout Thursday morning despite an order to work from the union, after the province's 3,200 longshoremen rejected the latest contract proposal by a 51 per cent margin Wednesday night.

The prime minister's announcement that the government has "made a decision" to take action in the dispute came today in the Commons in reply to a question from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield. Trudeau said plans for intervention would be announced in detail "in due course."

SHIPS IDLE

In Vancouver harbor 15 ocean-going ships are sitting idle, including four freighters which were loading grain when the work stoppage went into effect.

During a six-week strike which was suspended in November when the dockers approved a 90-day truce, the National Harbors Board operated grain loading facilities and the union provided gangs to handle grain cargoes in compliance an undertaking given earlier by the union to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

Longshoremen's union representatives were meeting today in an attempt to resolve differences which led to rejection of a recommended three-year settlement.

Federal mediator William Kelly met briefly with both sides Thursday, but said afterward he has received no commitment from either side to talk again.

FARMERS WORRIED

Meanwhile on the prairies the new dock shutdown is causing widespread concern among grain producers. G. L. Harrold, president of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said today the shutdown will have "drastic effects on Canada's export markets of grain."

Farmers' Union of Alberta president Paul Babey of Edmonton said "it seems to me the government will have no alternative but to see that the grain is kept moving.

"The western farmer is hit severely any time there is a stoppage but especially this year when grain delivery opportunities have been limited."

BANKS OFFER TO ASSIST ON INFLATION

Times News Services

TORONTO—Canada's chartered banks announced today they may join the fight against inflation by not boosting service charges this year and by keeping loan rates in line with changes in personal savings deposit interest rates.

A. H. Crockett, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, made public a letter to Dr. John Young, prices and income commission chairman, agreeing to the restraints, depending on "widespread acceptance" by business leaders.

Opposition Not Welcome At Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield today the government will not invite opposition MPs to a federal-provincial conference later this month because they have been "more of a hindrance than a help" in fighting inflation.

Trudeau, in a Commons exchange, said the government would not object to provincial delegations including opposition party members.

"But this supposes the provincial governments are able to find some constructive and co-operative members in the opposition."

The two-day conference, which begins Feb. 15, will discuss the economic situation, pollution and the report of the federal-provincial tax-structure committee.

700-Ton Egyptian Ship Sunk by Israeli Jets

Times News Services

Israeli jets sank a 711-ton Egyptian minelayer in the Red Sea today soon after Egyptian frogmen attacked two Israeli ships in the port of Elath harbor, sinking one and causing the other to be beached.

The Egyptian minelayer went to the bottom in the Hurghada sector of the gulf, south of Shadwan Island. The vessel was identified as one of the T-43 type, equipped with two gun turrets with twin-barrelled cannon, machine-guns, mine-laying equipment and anti-submarine devices.

The ship normally carries 80 crew members.

A Cairo spokesman described the ship as "an auxiliary supply vessel" and that all crew members were rescued.

Egypt said it shot down two Israeli Mirages and that artillery drove off Israeli helicopters trying to rescue one of the pilots who parachuted to a nearby island.

In addition to the ship attack, Israeli said its planes carried out six hours of raids against Egyptian targets along the Suez Canal and that two bombing attacks struck deep inside Egypt, one 200 miles south of Cairo.

It was the eighth Israeli air raid deep into Egypt since Jan. 7 and the third against Tel el-Kabir, located about 30 miles from Ismailia.

Earlier, two Egyptian jet fighter-bombers streaked across the Suez canal.

An Israeli spokesman said they hit a UN observation post.

The spokesman made no mention of casualties to UN personnel but said two other Egyptian planes made bombing runs south of Port Taufiq and wounded one Israeli soldier.

OTTAWA — The federal government's main spending estimates for 1970-71 will be tabled in the Commons Wednesday, says Treasury Board President C. M. Drury.

Phosphate Ban Likely—Greene

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal regulations to control phosphate content of detergents will come into effect "not later than this summer" and phosphates probably will be banned within three years, Resources Minister J. J. Greene said today.

Earlier in the Commons he said Canada will work with the United States and the provinces to control the threat phosphates pose to clean lakes and rivers.

Mr. Greene said "gentle persuasion" hasn't worked with phosphate manufacturers and soap makers and more forceful action is the result.

"We are going to regulate to the ultimate end of banning," he said in an interview.

Manufacturers wanted the taxpayer to build plants to remove phosphates from sewage but this would cost billions and would be too slow.

They were working to find a replacement for phosphates in detergents and regulations would probably make them "work harder." Nitrates were the most probable replacement but Mr. Greene warned that it isn't known how they will affect bodies of water.

Phosphates are said to stimulate growth of algae to a degree that kills lakes.

In the Commons, his statement emphasized joint action with the United States and the provinces.

SAIGON (Reuters) — An unnamed American officer who issued press credentials to two U.S. military intelligence agents has been reprimanded, relieved of his duties and transferred to a new assignment, the U.S. command announced today.

Talks Adjourned

WARSAW (Reuters)—West Germany and Poland today ended a preliminary round of talks aimed at improving relations between the two countries.

Anti-Inflationary Program—Bennett

An "anti-inflationary" provincial budget 14 per cent bigger than the first billion-dollar B.C. budget one year ago was presented today by Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Revenues in the coming year will soar $141 million to a record $1,166,177,415 and expenditures will rise by the same amount to $1,165,460,000, Bennett estimated.

A variety of increases in welfare payments and aid to homeowners, promised in the 1969 provincial election, are included in the budget. There is no increase in taxes which Bennett describes as Canada's lowest.

Bennett told a press conference the budget is a "realistic" one in a period of inflationary pressure and defended the 14 per cent increase as anti-inflationary because his budget is balanced.

The surplus predicted is less than $1,000,000 but past experience indicates a much larger surplus can be expected in a good economic year.

Small Increases for Many People

Among the new proposals in the budget, read to the legislature by Bennett this afternoon, are the following, effective April 1:

The annual homeowner grant raised from $150 to $160 maximum.

Supplementary old age allowance payments for old age pensioners raised to a maximum of $150.

Social allowances raised by $5 per head of household and for each dependent.

Nursing home social assistance rates increased by $35 a month to a maximum of $280 and boarding home rates increased $15 a month to a maximum of $135.

A $500 grant or $2,500 second mortgage for purchase of older homes by tenants of two years' residence, the proposal to last for one year only, possibly to be renewed later.

Municipal Per Capita Grant Up

Municipal per capita grants raised $2 to $30, the increase tied to social welfare spending. It should add about $295,000 to the Greater Victoria municipal budget.

Bennett said $25 million will be added to the provincial home acquisition grant fund, $35 million will be invested in the provincial owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway to help build an extension to Dease Lake, 175 miles north of Stewart. Also $7 million will be added to the civil service salary budget.

He said he was "recommended" greater succession duty exemptions which would "materially reduce succession duties on our citizens."

A bill to be introduced today will raise exemptions on valuation of survivors' pensions from $100 to $250 and will completely exempt the family home, Bennett said.

Another bill would amend the municipal sewage treatment plant act but no details were given. The province currently pays 75 per cent of treatment plant costs over a basic two-mill levy.

Spending will be slowed up in all departments except labor, which shows a drop of $2.4 million as a result of the final $10 million in payments to the Workmen's Compensation Board being made in the current year.

Bennett said in the budget speech that "rampant inflation" continues to be the "greatest threats to the free world economies today."

He pledged to support the federal government in the fight against inflation and said "this

Clyne Replies To Williams

The chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today accused a member of the legislature with making an irresponsible allegation against the forest industry giant and its employees in a statement in the house Tuesday.

J. V. Clyne wired Robert Williams (NDP — Vancouver East):

"The statement which you have made in the legislature concerning MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. that it 'deals in privileges with the 'government' is a contemptible attack on this company and its staff.

"Anyone who would make such a totally unsupported and irresponsible allegation against others under the protection of legislative immunity is a coward and is unfit to be a member of the legislature or to hold any other responsible office.

"If you care to sue me for this statement I will be pleased to give you the name of my solicitor, who has instructions to accept the service of any writ you may issue."

Clyne said the wire was in reply to allegations in the legislature as reported by newspapers.

Biodegradability—Is It Key To Detergent Pollution?

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

This week on the floor of the Legislature, Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson, said that as a homemaker she is vitally concerned about pollutant qualities of detergents now in domestic use. So much so that a while back she instituted her own campaign to discover the qualities of various detergents on the market and the ingredients included in them.

She spent days going along store aisles where there were displays of detergents "packaged in every hue, emblazoned with stars, circles and pictures of lily-clean hands."

She learned a lot of new words like enzymes and enzolves. She read of new cleaning miracles "but what was new was not stated."

Nowhere did she find simple, specific wordings that gave easily understood facts and not superlatives.

In the course of her research she became familiar with the word biodegradable, a term that means a detergent is capable (that is to say — 90 per cent capable) of being broken down by bacteria in a matter of hours.

She also discovered that while many detergents now sold are partly biodegradable, they are not wholly so. And that "the key to biodegradability is the speed with which the substance breaks down . . . and the importance of the speed factor in relation to the substance is to ensure that phosphates are broken down quickly."

★ ★ ★

Here, the Legislature was told that "The homemaker must know if doing away with phosphates in detergents will indeed help the pollution malaise, whether the effluent runs off by way of a sewage system or a septic tank.

"She has a right to know whether biodgradability is a concrete solution . . . half-truths are not enough."

To speed this knowledge, the minister had set up her own experiment. From under her desk she produced the evidence — eight neatly capped glass bottles filled with pink, purple, green and colorless liquids.

Brands of detergents reported recently in the press as having certain levels of phosphates (with the exception of those with less than one per cent content) were used.

Measurements for each test were exactly the same and the "quantity required" as noted on the jars was the quantity recommended on the package of each product, specifically for top-loading automatic washing machines. These products were thoroughly mixed with water a week before they made their debut on the floor of the Legislature, to ensure every opportunity of achieving dissolution.

★ ★ ★

Some of them broke down in a few hours. Some in a few days. In one instance only — and that was in the case of "a concentrate, but a non-pollutant and biodegradable" was there no sediment left in the bottom of the jar and the product appeared to be almost completely dissolved.

Later, in her own office Mrs. Dawson showed me that test jar. She shook it. Turned it upside down. It remained colorless and with no evidence of foam.

She picked up another jar. Shook it. Immediately it foamed and produced suds.

Sediment was evident in varying degrees in seven of the jars.

Isobel Dawson doesn't plan to stop with her eight jars of evidence. Now she is going to have the sediment in each one of those jars analyzed by experts.

She believes that "homemakers are most anxious to help search out an answer to the pollution problem . . . but in order to help they must know the truths from the half-truths in the detergent area."

Therefore the "whole aspect of biodegradability, in relation to detergents, should be pursued . . . not only by those in government but also by those concerned in the production and use of the modern washing compound."

She herself intends "to keep talking and working" toward this end. She hopes all women with the same concern will join her.

"After all, detergent or no detergent, the family wash must be done. Give us the answers and we'll get on with the job."

WOROBETZ NEW VICEROY

REGINA (CP) — Dr. Stephen Worobetz, a Saskatoon surgeon, this week became Canada's first lieutenant-governor of Ukrainian descent.

The 55-year-old native of Krydor, Sask., swore to do his best for the people of Saskatchewan as their 13th lieutenant governor.

He received the Great Seal of the Province, symbolic of the trust put in the Queen's representative in Saskatchewan.

Man Gets Five Years After Death Threat And Holdup Melee

Andrew P. Matwick, 27, of 777 Fort, was sentenced today to five years in prison after he threatened a downtown store clerk with death before fleeing with $364 Thursday night.

Matwick, who pleaded guilty to robbery before Judge William Ostler, was chased and caught by two employees of Eaton's store shortly after he ran from the building with the money in a paper bag.

Police testified the accused approached Mrs. Mary E. Carey, 1381 Pandora, a cashier in the stationery department at 7:50 p.m. and handed her a note that read:

"This is a holdup. Give me all the money or I will kill you."

The accused had his hand in his pocket giving the impression he had a gun.

Mrs. Carey stalled for time but was told by Matwick to hurry up and she was given a bag by the accused for the money.

Matwick ran from the store with the bag after Mrs. Carey screamed. Employees Bohdan Hryb, 17, of 639 Foul Bay, and Tarjei Andersen, 896 Violet, chased him down View, along Government and up up Fort to Broad where they caught him and held him for police.

"I do not have a gun—I wish to hell I did," Matwick told police when he was caught.

Ostler asked the accused if he had any explanation for the robbery and Matwick answered he got "fed up, I guess."

Matwick had a record of convictions including breaking and entering and theft, possession of stolen property, theft, and attempted breaking and entering.

The chase during crowded late-night shopping caused a commotion, and one woman with an unbrella watching the struggle thought the clerks were thugs beating up an innocent man.

"It appeared she was going to attack with her umbrella," said one store employee.

Business 'Pays' Says Haddock

A convention centre will be built in Victoria as soon as the tourist industry organizes itself and is ready to support the project, Mayor Courtney Haddock said Thursday.

He was optimistic that all segments of the industry will soon support the project.

"I'm in favor of a convention centre, but it must be financed entirely by the industry," he said. "Homeowners should not have to pay for it."

(Hotel and motel associations have already rejected a proposal that they collect a room tax to be used to finance the centre.)

The mayor's comments followed a suggestion by Ron B. Worley, deputy minister of travel indsutry, that the city get cracking on building a centre.

"The need for a centre in Victoria is so great, its literally amazing to me that something in this respect hasn't yet been done, he stated.

He was speaking on tourist promotion at the Victoria Rotary Club luncheon in the Empress Hotel.

"There are millions of dollars waiting to be spent, just anywhere, where there's a convention centre located."

★ ★ ★

He said Penticton is attracting more tourist convention dollars than Victoria because it has a large centre.

Penticton, last year, was host to 33 conventions worth $3.11 million, neary two-and-a-half times as much as Victoria, he said.

Victoria had 45 conventions, with a value to the community of $1.41 million.

He said Penticton was able to draw larger conventions because of its 2,000 seat Peach Bowl.

He cited the convention of the World Wide Church of God which has its headquarters in Pasadena, Calif.

"A total of 7,300 delegates, including 2,400 children turned up for the convention," he said.

He said the church has booked Penticton's convention facilities for the next four years. Tentative bookings have been made for 1974 and 1977.

"It is a travesty that Victoria, with all the things it has to offer the tourist, hasn't got a convention centre," he said.

Driving Offences Take 30% Jump

Safety requires the co-operation of everyone, a traffic safety forum was told Thursday night by Ray Hadfield, superintendent of the B.C. motor vehicles branch.

This co-operation is needed to combat the 30 per cent increase of driving offences in Victoria alone over 1969.

And it is needed to educate drivers under 25 years of age who comprise 20 per cent of the driving population, 40 per cent of the motor vehicle accidents and in turn account for 50 per cent of traffic injuries.

IT WORKS

Hadfield read the speech of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who was to address the forum at Newcombe Auditorium but was unable to because of last-minute legislative duties.

The address pointed out the effectiveness of the amendments to the Canadian Criminal Code making it compulsory for a driver to give a breath sample when asked by a police officer.

It said the over-.08-per-cent-blood-alcohol-content law proved to be an "excellent deterrent" over he Christmas and New Year holidays.

Both Victoria and Saanich were presented with certificates of merit for maintaining fatality-free Safe Driving Weeks last Dec. 1 to Dec. 7.

Savage to Back Mayor On Tourist Fund Review

Ald. Clyde Savage said today he will back Mayor Courtney Haddock's push for a complete review of expenditures used for tourist promotion.

But, he said today, he will strongly oppose any move to reduce the present $60,000-a-year city grant to the Victoria Visitors Bureau.

"And I'm not contradicting myself," Savage said. "The $60,000 we grant the bureaus in my opinion well spent. I think that's been well established over the years by the rapid growth of the number of tourists coming here.' '

He added that: "There may well be too many organizations trying to do the same thing."

Savage said he would like to see his proposal for a hotel room tax discussed again soon.

When he suggested the tax last year, with the blessings of Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, hotel and motel owners in Greater Victoria rejected the proposal.

Savage said that "one day these people are going to have to accept the tax."

Haddock was equally sure Victoria hotel and motel operators soon will willingly impose a room tax if they want more facilities for visitors.

●

"It has always been my contention that the user should pay for the facility he wants," Haddock said.

"I have paid as high as 21 per cent in room tax in Rome, and didn't object. All the people there are saying is 'if we provide the tourist with amenities, then the tourist must pay for them.'

"It would be the same in Victoria. The hotel, motel and tourist oriented people want money for publicity and for a convention centre, then let them raise the funds.

"It certainly doesn't seem fair to me that the homeowner should be expected to pick up the tab."

Both Haddock and Savage noted that Honolulu Mayor Frank F. Fasi two weeks ago recommended a 10-per-cent room tax for all hotels in Hawaii.

Fasi said the revenues generated would be used for pollution control as well as tourist promotion.

Savage said he thinks a five-per-cent room tax is quite reasonable, would be accepted by our visitors and would generate the funds required to provide the Visitor's Bureau with more than $60,000 a year for promotion as well as provide the cash to build and operate a convention centre."

Bishop Vote Starts Behind Pink Ribbons

Christ Church Cathedral closed its doors to the public today as 53 clergy and 149 lay delegates began voting for a new Anglican Bishop of Vancouver Island.

Doors leading into the cathedral sanctuary were tied with pink ribbon and only accredited delegates, from every parish on the Island, were admitted.

Voting is expected to continue until later afternoon.

Ballots are being cast separately on each of the seven clergymen nominated and the successful candidate must have a two-thirds' majority on two separate votes — the vote of the clergy and the vote of the laity.

Ballot papers were issued at 10:30 this morning after Archbishop Godfrey Gower of New Westminster, metropolitan of the Anglican Church in British Columbia, had pronounced a blessing on the proceedings.

He asked that the voters be "guided by the Holy Spirit" in their choice of a successor to Bishop John Ogle Anderson, who died last November after only four months in office.

"The system of voting may be cumbersome," the archbishop told a Times reporter, "but it ensures that the chosen candidate has a majority support of both clergy and laymen."

Gower said the system is peculiar to the diocese of Vancouver Island and might conceivably be changed in the future.

There is a definite movement toward simplification and unification of Anglican procedures across Canada."

The archbishop celebrated holy communion in the cathedral at 8 a.m. when members of the public were admitted.

Three Victoria clergymen are among the seven nominees — Dean Brian Whitlow, administrator of the diocese and dean of the cathedral; Ven. Hywel Jones, rector of St. Mary's Church Oak Bay, and Rev. H. Gordon Walker, rector of St. David's Cordova Bay.

Call Sounded For Former Yukoners

Can the call of the wild pierce the dense foliage of the city of gardens?

Victoria Chamber of Commerce hopes it can, and will, encourage ex-Yukoners to rally round Commissioner of the Yukon Jim Smith when he addresses a general membership meeting at lunch in the Empress Hotel Wednesday.

As many as possible have been urged to reserve a place by contacting the chamber office, ensuring that they will hear Smith's message, Should the Youkon Take Over B.C.?

It is hoped a substantial number of MLAs, who have been exposed to the other side of the question—Should B.C. Take Over the North?—will be on hand.

A week later, at 7:30 p.m. in Newcombe Auditorium, the chamber is sponsoring a panel and public participation on the subject of the federal taxation White Paper.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you tell me which are the five largest airports in the world?—D.D.

A. Statistics available locally list only the largest, which is Dulles International Airport in Washington, D.C. The National Aeronautical Association would probably be able to supply the information you need. Its address is 806 15th Street N.W., Washington, D.C., 20005.

Saanich to Ponder Million-Dollar List

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council will sit down Monday night to consider a multi-million-dollar shopping list for capital projects for the coming five years.

Items contained in the preliminary list drawn up by department heads are not being made public and the council meeting is expected to be closed.

Local municipalities in British Columbia are required by the Municipal Act to prepare five-year capital budgets. This is not the same as a referendum, although some items could be subject to a referendum.

A five-year capital budget referendum in Victoria city totalling $8.5 million was defeated by voters last June.

★

In 1968, the Municipal Act was changed to require councils, on or before May 15 in each year, to prepare and adopt a five-year capital expenditure program bylaw showing estimates of the proposed source and application for funds for capital purposes for each year of the program.

In 1969, the act was amended to state that the program adopted remains in effect until a new program is adopted the following year.

Essentially, decisions made by council each year at regular budget time as well as individual referendums are supplemented by five-year planning, but open to annual revision.

This is the first time Saanich has drawn up this kind of a program under the new legislation, although a capital projects referendum was approved by voters in 1965.

A start on the first draft of a capital expenditure program was made during 1969 but was not put into final form for presentation to council.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said today the Saanich five-year budget is still not in final form and council will be having its first look at "what is essentially a shopping list" Monday night.

"It has not been subject to any cuts and some of the items will just never get off the ground," he said.

It will be his recommendation that the meeting be closed to the public.

"The fact is that it is a staff report to council and I want council to feel free to react quite freely," he said.

Curtis also said it is not his intention to have a series of closed meetings.

"We will not keep it under wraps until all the decisions are made and say, here's the list," he said.

"This meeting and possibly the second will be closed."

Asked if the decisions will be made by that time anyway, he said "I doubt it very much."

The five-year budget, when it is decided, will serve as a general guideline for Saanich during this period.

★

It was disclosed last month that the municipal affairs department has registered concern at the lack of such a budget in Saanich and that there will be no further approval for borrowing money until the budget is completed and filed with the provincial government.

The budget will reflect all capital items — those requiring borrowing and referendums; sewers and waterworks, which do not require referendums unless a sufficient petition is received; and items generally financed from current revenue and requiring no borrowing.

Can't Stop Mining In Parks: Kiernan

By BRUCE YEMEN
And VIC PARSONS

The throne speech debate growled to an end in the legislature Thursday night with a 5½-hour debate on government parks policy which was extended by a bitter exchange between Premier Bennett and Opposition Leader Barrett.

Debate, which ran through the supper hour with only a five-minute break, was on a non-confidence motion proposed by Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) regretting that no legislative safeguards were included in the throne speech to protect provincial parks and other public lands from "arbitrary despoliation."

The non-confidence motion was defeated by a 33 to 16 vote at 8:30 p.m. and the main motion, to adopt the throne speech, was passed by a 33 to 17 vote at 9 p.m. after Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan wound up the two-week old debate.

It was the second night sitting of the week to run through the supper hour on a non-confidence motion. It was the third non-confidence motion of the throne speech debate, the first two being on automobile insurance and hydro power development policies.

Encourage Mining

The government was accused in the debate of not only tolerating but in effect encouraging mining claims in provincial parks and parkland reserves.

Appeals were heard for legislative protection of parks by removal of discretionary cabinet power to change park bundaries.

The power should be handed over to the legislature, the opposition said.

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan defended parks policy as "progressive" and indicated the government will continue to take the view that parkland reserves should be open to mineral claims on the assumption that a park should not be set up in the middle of a rich mining area.

Debate on the motion was already three hours old when Barrett and Bennett tangled just before 6 p.m.

"No deals with the speaker," Barrett suddenly cried, apparently fearing that Bennett was arranging with Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch to wind up the afternoon sitting with Bennett having the floor.

"You're stupid," Bennett told Barrett.

"Caught with your hand in the cookie jar," Barrett said.

'Being Crude'

A bit later, after being called "stupid" several times by Bennett, Barrett said heatedly:

"You're not the king of British Columbia."

"You're stupid," Bennett angrily repeated.

Barrett then said Bennett was being crude.

Shortly after Bennett handed a note to Kiernan, who was speaking, the opposition began charging a government "filibuster".

Kiernan defended parks policy with statistics showing that one new park each month — for a total of 144 — had been created by the province in the past 12 years.

But Opposition Leader Dave Barrett countered with statistics showing that total park acreage had declined almost 2,000,000 acres from 1958 to 1968 from 8.4 million to 6.4 million acres.

That was an average loss of 16,000 acres a month, he said, adding that at that rate the province can't afford too many more of Kiernan's parks.

Kiernan said that as long as he was minister there would continue to be at least one new park each month.

'Gift of Gab'

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said the minister's willingness to redraw park boundary lines to exclude mining claims was like the action of a "mad cartographer" who can't resist the "mining promoters with the gift of grab."

Macdonald said the way to put teeth into park protection was to allow park boundary changes only after a legislative committee hearing and an act of the legislature.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) suggested a parks commission independent of the government should rule on park changes, and hold public hearings on such matters.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) attacked Kiernan as the man who, as mines minister, allowed mining claims that turned Strathcona Park into an economically viable mining operation.

He also asked who the "power broker" was in the deal last summer in which timber cutting rights in the park were traded to a logging company for a smaller portion of land at Cape Scott.

Defends Swap

Kiernan defended the government's acceptance of $50,000 from Bethlehem Copper Corp. for the right to stake claims in a 36-acre map reserve around Divide Lake (called Quintanton Lake by Kiernan) near Ashcroft.

Kiernan said the lake is in the middle of one of the best copper areas in the province and would be unsuitable for park purposes because it would be surrounded by mining.

He said the existence of parkland reserves is to protect future potential parkland and pointed out there are 2,632 such reserves compared with 276 parks. Not all the reserves are likely to be parks. Kiernan explained, but the government wants them to be first priority for parks if needed.

He admitted that he can't stop a mining company from staking claims in a reserve area but said "we can ask for compensation."

The non-confidence motion was proposed by Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound), following a review of the Cypress Bowl controversy which he cited as an example of the failure to protect public lands.

Williams showed a color photograph of 1964 plans submitted by private developers for the West Vancouver bowl and contrasted it with a black-and-white newspaper photograph showing the scarred mountainside in 1969.

He criticized the province's policy of allowing developers to lease, develop and then purchase property for its failure to require financial quarantees.

Understaffed

He said the department of lands is understaffed and unable to assess adequately plans submitted for development to make sure they are feasible.

Williams said the province should have a new plan for development of Cypress Bowl drawn up and offer it in open bidding to developers. If there are no takers, the government should develop the area itself, he said.

Williams said a government decision in 1968 against building an access road to the bowl at public expense turned the developers into "a cut-and-run group" with the result that excessive logging went on, ostensibly to clear land for ski hills and other facilities.

Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay), seconding the non-confidence motion, said the government "had proved itself a champion in desecrating our land.

"We need a more definite program of land use in the province," he added.

Fire Hall Bylaw Set in Maple Bay

NORTH COWICHAN — Residents of Maple Bay fire district will be asked to approve a $30,000 bylaw for the construction of a new firehall if they can pore the full amount to $50,000, North Cowichan council decided Wednesday.

Ald, Tom Burge, chairman of Ald.. Tom Burge, hairma nof the fire committee, reported on a meeting of the fire department at Maple Bay on Tuesday night.

He said sketch plans acquired by the department for a new Maple Bay fire building projected a cost of $65,000 plus 7 per cent for architectural and supervisory fees.

After consideration, it had been agreed that the plans could be cut to a total of $50,000 — including the fees — and the municipality would be asked to come up with $20,000 of the cost.

Burge said the meeting also raised the question of the inevitability of forming a central fire alarm system for all of North Cowichan.

He said the present system, which relies on telephone calls from a variety of volunteer and police sources from Maple Bay to Chemainus, was "relatively inefficient and costly."

A meeting will be held tonight in the South End fire hall between fire chiefs and the RCMP to discuss the matter.

Whalebone Corsets Will Never Return

By PENNY SAVER

"Mom, what's it like to wear a whalebone corset?"

"Ask your grandmother or Mathilda," I replied with a miffed sniff. "I'm much too young to know about such things.

"Mathilda doesn't wear corsets," interjected my younger daughter from the corner easy chair. "She says her body's been pinched and squeezed for so many years that it deserved a chance to do what it wants to."

"In that case," I said to my elder daughter, "Mathilda should be able to tell you what you want to know. But what made you think of whalebone corsets?"

"I was trying on my new bra-slip and suddenly realized how much women's underwear has changed. Even in the few years I've had to worry about underpinnings things have been steamlined. And I can't imagine turning back!

"Even the shapes have changed. The line is softer.

"For example, just a few months ago a girl with a figure like mine had to search for a bra that didn't have 'a sixteenth of an inch of shaping.'

"Bra-slips were particularly bad, which is why I waited til now to buy one.

"But I did find one today. It is mini-length with a tidy bit of embroidery trim in a cling proof fabric and the natural shade that is everywhere right now.

"The straps are very, very slender and, both stretch and adjust; the cut is very low. But the best part is that the bra section is shaped from a single, unseamed piece of very light weight elastic nylon. It shapes very nicely and is very comfortable.

It cost me $10, which, these days, isn't bad at all.

"And remember the complaint you and your friends made last year about body stockings? . . . that they had no 'escape hatch'?

"Well, every body stocking I saw today had an excellent one, most being fastened with hooks and eyes."

My daughter went on to describe the various body stockings she saw.

One for $4 is shaped by full length seams from a slightly elastic fabric. The straps are elastic and adjustable and there is a bit of elastic at the leg. There is no padding at all and she said the whole thing looked terribly light and comfortable.

Again it was in a natural shade and had tiny hooks to take detatchable garters for those who still wear stockings instead of panty hose.

For $9 she saw another much like it in an ecru shade with a bit more of a cup and more control for a larger figure.

At $10 there was a body stocking that wasn't designed to cling to the body.

Instead of being made of an all elastic fabric, she explained, it was made of the same kind of nylon as a slip. This, it seems, is designed for wearing under pant suits.

"You know, Mom, you wear four or five separate pieces of underwear," she concluded. "If you were really smart you'd cut that down to just two, and not sacrifice one bit of modesty in doing it!"

If you would like to know where my daughter shopped, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

High-Rise Fireplace Forms Partial Wall

Even traditional designs have forsworn the idea of houses as a series of boxes. With central heating, insulation and double glazing for windows and sliding glass doors, interior climate control is well in hand, so that rooms and walls can be arranged to the benefit of good living rather than just creature comfort.

The relatively small house, by architect Edward H. Fickett, F.A.I.D., shown here, seems spacious because the rooms flow together, yet each has its own entity. Key to the whole plan is the handsome fireplace that stretches upward through the second story, functioning as a partial wall for the rooms above, and partially separating them from each other. It also serves the same purpose on the lower floor, marking the division between dining room, living room and kitchen, without blocking off the rooms completely.

Styled as it is, the fireplace opening could be a solid black space, without the hearth, and the structure would be a stunning design element in the room. The combination of smooth white plaster and natural colored, textured concrete blocks works a fine study in contrasts in a rigid geometric pattern.

The living room is two storeys high, sharing the ceiling with the two mezzanine rooms. This also, contributes greatly to the spacious feeling of the house, and keeps the room in scale with the dramatic fireplace.

Vancouver Designer Builds Own Business

VANCOUVER (CP) — When Simone Nashman arrived here from Toronto 18 months ago, she couldn't get employment as a dress designer. So she created her own job.

She started designing and cutting out dresses on the floor of the $85-a-month apartment she shared with two others.

"I used to go out selling by bus, carrying as many dresses as I could," she says. "I'd put them into shops on consignment."

Today, the buyers come to her. The shop that bears her name is turning out 300 dresses a month.

Her equal partner in the project is Dave Madiuk, 27, who has his own construction company. He joined her after coming to the 22-year-old designer's shop to do alterations.

Her original partner had dropped out and Mr. Madiuk felt the project had potential.

"It's getting to the point where I like this business more than construction," he says.

The average Simone dress—"We couldn't even afford to put labels on the dresses at first"— costs about $30.

HAS OWN STYLE

In addition to a full-time staff of one, Simone has another 15 seamstresses working in their homes. Mr. Madiuk says he expects production to double by April.

Simone says her designs are "my own style," rejecting strict classifications. She produces only four dresses from each design.

"We want to supply mainly the specialty shops," she says. "We want to encourage people to shop in these places.

"We really feel we can do something to change styles in Vancouver, to make people more aware of and interested in high fashion."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Peek-a-Boo Problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now that Alvin is retired, he's at home all day, but that's not my problem.

There is a young woman who rents the apartment directly across the hall from us, and her claim to fame is that she is 44-34-42 — or something like that. Anyway, last Sunday when Miss 44 was getting her morning paper, the wind blew her door shut and locked her out. All she had on was one of those shorty see-through peek-a-boo nighties.

Well, Miss 44 rang our doorbell, and when poor Alvin opened the door and saw her standing there like that he was so embarrassed he didn't know what to do, so he yelled for me to get the caretaker while he stood there talking to her.

Now, Abby, there are two old maid sisters living in the apartment right next to hers. Why didn't she ring their bell?

I get so nervous thinking this might happen again I can't sleep at night. What do you suggest?—Alvin's wife.

DEAR WIFE: I suggest you forget it. Your locked-out neighbor was probably more embarrassed than Alvin. And it's not likely to happen again.

DEAR ABBY: My dearest friend whom I love very, very much is addicted to diet pills and sleeping pills. She goes to two different doctors and gets prescriptions from each. One doctor doesn't know about the other. This has been going on for years, and now she has found still a third doctor who doesn't know about the other two.

We have had long talks, and this woman confides in me. I have begged her to tell her family doctor what she's doing, but she refuses.

I am very worried about her, Abby. She used to be groggy all morning, and now it's mid-afternoon before she can shake herself out of the fog.

Do you think I would be justified in calling her doctor and telling him what I know? If you say so I will call him immediately.

By the way, this woman's husband can't be too sharp because he doesn't know she is on pills. She has two young children and is such a wonderful person, I hate to see what she is doing to herself. Please advise me. Nameless Friend.

DEAR FRIEND: Tell your friend that you will give her three days in which to tell her doctor, and if she doesn't tell him, you will tell him, because you love her too much to stand idly by and watch her destroy herself. In this way, you'll be giving her a chance to save her face. I'll bet she tells her doctor.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the benefit of DISGUSTED SISTER who wondered why her brother Gordy left a beautiful 36-year-old wife for an "old wrinkled grandmother of 50."

I happen to be married to a "young, unwrinkled grandmother of 50," and I couldn't be happier. This little grandmother is warm and affectionate and full of love. She has never said, "Not now—you'll muss my hair!" And when I am in a loving mood, she'll never say, "Is that all you ever think of?"

No man wants to be married to an untouchable goddess. — Fifty-Year-Old Grandpa

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Recently, I purchased some wool crepe, and after preshrinking it (by wrapping in a wet sheet) I found it had shrunk considerably. The fabric was full of ripples that were impossible to press out. Please tell me how to treat this kind of material to prevent shrinkage in the finished garment. Also, how do you remove the wrinkled effect? — Mrs. E.I.

Dear Mrs. E.I.:

You made your first mistake when you tried to shrink your fabric the way you did. It is very seldom that you will buy fabric that isn't already shrunk unless someone has brought it back as a gift from a foreign country.

Any fabric that is subjected to as much moisture as you have placed on yours will shrink and continue to shrink. This is not the normal amount of shrinkage you would have encountered in construction of your garment or in normal dry cleaning.

Hopefully, you have a good dry-cleaner near your home and you can have the entire piece of fabric professionally pressed and begin all over again.

After this, be sure to press construction seams with your steam iron or else use one of the chemically treated press cloths that will give you the hot steam you need but not make your fabric too wet.

Mrs. Farmer's booklet, "Your Pattern and You," will assist you in fitting your new garment with tailor-made precision. Send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

160,000 Miss Paper In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun, involved in a contract dispute with its employees since last fall, was forced to curtail publication Thursday.

The evening newspaper was able to run off only one of three regular editions and missed most subscribers in the Greater Vancouver area.

Managing Editor William T. Galt said some 100,000 copies out of a normal Thursday run of 260,000 papers were produced and delivered.

The newspaper bought time on Vancouver radio stations to warn subscribers there would be no paper Thursday night, blaming a production slowdown for the development.

Galt said The Sun decided to cancel its home and final editions after the press run fell hours behind schedule.

He said there was a limit to the length of time carrier boys could be kept waiting and that Pacific Press Ltd. had to clear printing and press facilities for The Province.

Pacific Press produces The Sun and the morning Province.

Both The Sun and The Province have been periodically late reaching subscribers due to production difficulties.

Rape Trial Defendants Acquitted by Jury

Two men accused of raping a 14-year-old girl were found not guilty and discharged by Victoria assize court Thursday night.

An all-male jury of 12 deliberated its verdict for more than five hours before returning a not guilty verdict at 11:05 p.m.

"I hope you will let this be a lesson to you," Mr. Justice David Verchere told William Harvey Hollinger, 22, of Duncan, and Michael Derek Newstead, 17, of 482 Burnside East, just before they left the prisoner's dock after the six-day trial.

•

They had been jointly charged with raping the girl in a secluded area near Interurban Road late Nov. 11 and early Nov. 12 last year.

Defence counsel Brian Roberts for Hollinger and Ronald F. Barber for Newstead argued that the girl consented to having intercourse with the two accused.

Defence counsel Roberts told the jury the testimony of the girl was unreliable.

"She has the emotions of a child and the body of a woman," he said. "Children live largely in a world of fantasy and they sometimes have difficulty distinguishing between fact and fancy."

Roberts said the girl had lots of opportunity to run away from the two accused had she wished.

Barber said the main issue in the trial was whether the girl consented to sexual intercourse or not.

He said it was significant that, after having intercourse in the back seat of the car, she sat between the two accused in the front.

Barber said a medical examination afterwards showed no welts, bruises or scratches on the girl's body, such as might be expected if she had been forcibly raped.

Newstead, the younger of the two accused, was the final witness for the defence.

He said he was picked up by police around 3 a.m. on Nov. 14 and taken to Saanich police station. There four hours, he made a statement to Detective George Walton, but he was tired and "hung over" and did not intend to say some of the things in the statement.

•

Under cross-examination by crown counsel J. W. Anderson, Newstead told how he and Hollinger met the girl at the Children's Aid Society group home on Carey Road and offered to drive her home.

On the way they stooped at a place near the Interurban Road. He produced some beer but the girl refused a drink.

A while later, Newstead said, the girl left the car and walked away. He went after her and asked what was the matter.

"I put my arm round her and we walked back to the car."

Newstead said he then had sexual intercourse with the girl and there was no protest. Later, outside his home on Burnside, he saw Hollinger and the girl in the back seat of the car.

Some time after that, he (Newstead) again had intercourse with her.

Nicholas Galitzine, a social worker at the group home on Carey Road, said the girl stayed there as an inmate and later as a visitor.

•

"I was appalled by her lackadaisical state," Galitzine said. "She seemed to be rejecting society and she had a devil-may-care attitude to everything."

Asked if the girl told the truth, he replied:

"I would be naive if I believed everything she said."

"In my opinion she was given to exaggeration," Galitzine said. "We like to trust everyone but I couldn't always believe her . . . she did a lot of play-acting."

Galitzine said Newstead, one of the accused, came to the Carey Road home for about three weeks.

"I found him every cooperative, responsive to discipline and ready to please. He was very loyal and would stand up for a friend in trouble.

Indians Dismiss Myth Of Equality in Law

MONTREAL (CP) — The white man's law was shot full of arrows Wednesday night by delegates attending a McGill University teach-in on the North American Indian.

Ron Grant, a Metis from Saskatchewan, told the story of Allen Thomas of the Salteaux reserve, trampled to death by a white mob on the night of May 13, 1963.

He said Thomas, 23, still recovering from tuberculosis, was too weak to run when the white men descended on an Indian encampment on the fair grounds of the prairie town of Glaslyn, Sask.

"Allen was still in his tent. They trampled him. They jumped up and down on him. They crushed his chest and crushed his skull.

"The police didn't come until the next morning. Allen was still alive, but they refused to take him to the hospital 45 miles away. They told an Indian to take him."

Allen Thomas died en route to hospital, and nine white men later were arrested by RCMP and charged with non-capital murder.

"I'll never forget the trial," Grant said. "I took off school to attend it. They made the Indians look like fools. Many couldn't speak English and there wasn't a proper interpreter.

So the white men got off."

Another delegate attending the three-day teach-in told the story of a young Indian girl, Rosemary Roper, whose bruised and violated body was found in a quarry near Williams Lake, B.C.

"It was about a year and a half ago," said Willie Dunn, Indian film-maker whose Ballad of Crowfoot was shown at the teach-in earlier.

Three men were arrested, but they had a lot of pull in the local town. The first charge was third-degree murder. Then it was reduced to manslaughter, then to common assault.

"You know what happened. They were fined. They were fined a total of $500.

"I remember the figure because a friend of mine, an Indian, was also fined $500 not too long after.

"He was fined $500 for killing a moose."

William Commanda, soft-spoken chief of 800 Algonquins at Maniwaki, Que., told of the shooting of 16-year-old Willie Mitchell by a Maniwaki constable a year ago.

On the night of Jan. 23, 1969, the constable ordered Willie and two of his friends, suspected of stealing light bulbs, to stop and be searched.

Willie ran, and the policeman fired. The bullet tore through his neck and cheek, but Willie recovered. The constable, who testified that he had tripped and fired his gun accidentally, was cleared of responsibility.

"Willie will never be the same," his mother said Wednesday night. "His neck was broken and all his teeth were smashed."

"You know what they did," said Commanda. "They promoted the constable. Now he swaggers around town with not one gun, but two. One on each hip."

Commanda said he is trying to have the case reopened.

B.C. Spending Up 14%

Anti-Inflation Plan—Bennett

By BRUCE YEMEN

An "anti-inflationary" provincial budget 14 per cent bigger than the first billion-dollar B.C. budget one year ago was presented today by Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Revenues in the coming year will soar $141 million to a record $1,166,177,415 and expenditures will rise by the same amount to $1,165,460,000, Bennett estimated.

A variety of increases in welfare payments and aid to homeowners, promised in the 1969 provincial election, are included in the budget. There is no increase in taxes which Bennett describes as Canada's lowest.

Bennett told a press conference the budget is a "realistic" one in a period of inflationary pressure and defended the 14 per cent increase as anti-inflationary because his budget is balanced.

The surplus predicted is less than $1,000,000 but past experience indicates a much larger surplus can be expected in a good economic year.

Small Increases for Many People

Among the new proposals in the budget, read to the legislature by Bennett this afternoon, are the following, effective April 1:

The annual homeowner grant raised from $150 to $160 maximum.

Supplementary old age allowance payments for old age pensioners raised to a maximum of $150.

Social allowances raised by $5 per head of household and for each dependent.

Nursing home social assistance rates increased by $35 a month to a maximum of $280 and boarding home rates increased $15 a month to a maximum of $135.

A $500 grant or $2,500 second mortgage for purchase of older homes by tenants of two years' residence, the proposal to last for one year only, possibly to be renewed later.

Municipal Per Capita Grant Up

Municipal per capita grants raised $2 to $30, the increase tied to social welfare spending. It should add about $295,000 to the Greater Victoria municipal budget.

Bennett said $25 million will be added to the provincial home acquisition grant fund, $35 million will be invested in the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway to help build an extension to Dease Lake, 175 miles north of Stewart. Also $7 million will be added to the civil service salary budget.

He said he has "recommended" greater succession duty exemptions which would "materially reduce succession duties on our citizens."

A bill to be introduced today will raise exemptions on valuation of survivors' pensions from $100 to $250 and will completely exempt the family home, Bennett said.

Another bill would amend the municipal sewage treatment plant act but no details were given. The province currently pays 75 per cent of treatment plant costs over a basic two-mill levy.

Spending will be slowed up in all departments except labor, which shows a drop of $2.4 million as a result of the final $10 million in payments to the Workmen's Compensation Board being made in the current year.

Bennett said in the budget speech that "rampant inflation" continues to be the "greatest threats to the free world economies today."

He pledged to support the federal government in the fight against inflation and said "this

PM Promises Action To End Dock Shutdown

Times News Services

British Columbia ports are at a standstill today as longshoremen picket for the second time in three months.

Prime Minister Trudeau has promised government action if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Picket lines were thrown up in Victoria late Thursday afternoon but no ships are at Ogden Point docks at present.

Dock workers in Vancouver and New Westminster began their walkout Thursday morning despite an order to work from the union, after the province's 3,200 longshoremen rejected the latest contract proposal by a 51 per cent margin Wednesday night.

The prime minister's announcement that the government has "made a decision" to take action in the dispute came today in the Commons in reply to a question from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield. Trudeau said plans for intervention would be announced in detail "in due course."

SHIPS IDLE

In Vancouver harbor 15 ocean-going ships are sitting idle, including four freighters which were loading grain when the work stoppage went into effect.

During a six-week strike which was suspended in November when the dockers approved a 90-day truce, the National Harbors Board operated grain loading facilities and the union provided gangs to handle grain cargoes in compliance an undertaking given earlier by the union to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

Longshoremen's union representatives were meeting today in an attempt to resolve differences which led to rejection of a recommended three-year settlement.

Federal mediator William Kelly met briefly with both sides Thursday, but said afterward he has received no commitment from either side to talk again.

FARMERS WORRIED

Meanwhile on the prairies the new dock shutdown is causing widespread concern among grain producers. G. L. Harrold, president of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said today the shutdown will have "drastic effects on Canada's export markets of grain."

Farmers' Union of Alberta president Paul Babey of Edmonton said "it seems to me the government will have no alternative but to see that the grain is kept moving.

"The western farmer is hit severely any time there is a stoppage but especially this year when grain delivery opportunities have been limited."

BANKS OFFER TO ASSIST ON INFLATION

Times News Services

TORONTO—Canada's chartered banks announced today they may join the fight against inflation by not boosting service charges this year and by keeping loan rates in line with changes in personal savings deposit interest rates.

A. H. Crockett, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, made public a letter to Dr. John Young, prices and income commission chairman, agreeing to the restraints, depending on "widespread acceptance" by business leaders.

Opposition Not Welcome At Meeting

OTTAWA, (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield today the government will not invite opposition MPs to a federal-provincial conference later this month because they have been "more of a hindrance than a help" in fighting inflation.

Trudeau, in a Commons exchange, said the government would not object to provincial delegations including opposition party members.

"But this supposes the provincial governments are able to find some constructive and co-operative members in the opposition."

The two-day conference, which begins Feb. 16, will discuss the economic situation, pollution and the report of the federal-provincial tax-structure committee.

700-Ton Egyptian Ship Sunk by Israeli Jets

Times News Services

Israeli jets sank a 711-ton Egyptian minelayer in the Red Sea today soon after Egyptian frogmen attacked two Israeli ships in the port of Elath harbor, sinking one and causing the other to be beached.

The Egyptian minelayer went to the bottom in the Hurghada sector of the gulf, south of Shadwan Island. The vessel was identified as one of the T-43 type, equipped with two gun turrets with twin-barrelled cannon, machine-guns, mine-laying equipment and anti-submarine devices.

The ship normally carries 80 crew members.

A Cairo spokesman described the ship as "an auxiliary supply vessel" and that all crew members were rescued.

Egypt said it shot down two Israeli Mirages and that artillery drove off Israeli helicopters trying to rescue one of the pilots who parachuted to a nearby island.

In addition to the ship attack, Israeli said its planes carried out six hours of raids against Egyptian targets along the Suez Canal and that two bombing attacks struck deep inside Egypt, one 200 miles south of Cairo.

It was the eighth Israeli air raid deep into Egypt since Jan. 7 and the third against Tel el-Kabir, located about 30 miles from Ismailia.

Earlier, two Egyptian jet fighter-bombers streaked across the Suez canal.

An Israeli spokesman said they hit a UN observation post.

The spokesman made no mention of casualties to UN personnel but said two other Egyptian planes made bombing runs south of Port Taufiq and wounded one Israeli soldier.

OTTAWA — The federal government's main spending estimates for 1970-71 will be tabled in the Commons Wednesday, says Treasury Board President C. M. Drury.

Phosphate Ban Likely—Greene

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal regulations to control phosphate content of detergents will come into effect "not later than this summer" and phosphates probably will be banned within three years, Resources Minister J. J. Greene said today.

Earlier in the Commons he said Canada will work with the United States and the provinces to control the threat phosphates pose to clean lakes and rivers.

Mr. Greene said "gentle persuasion" hasn't worked with phosphate manufacturers and soap makers and more forceful action is the result.

"We are going to regulate to the ultimate end of banning," he said in an interview.

Manufacturers wanted the taxpayer to build plants to remove phosphates from sewage but this would cost billions and would be too slow.

They were working to find a replacement for phosphates in detergents and regulations would probably make them "work harder." Nitrates were the most probable replacement but Mr. Greene warned that it isn't known how they will affect bodies of water.

Phosphates are said to stimulate growth of algae to a degree that kills lakes.

In the Commons, his statement emphasized joint action with the United States and the provinces.

Clyne Replies To Williams

The chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today accused a member of the legislature with making an irresponsible allegation against the forest industry giant and its employees in a statement in the house Tuesday.

J. V. Clyne wired Robert Williams (NDP — Vancouver East):

"The statement which you have made in the legislature concerning MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. that it 'deals in privileges with the government' is a contemptible attack on this company and its staff.

"Anyone who would make such a totally unsupported and irresponsible allegation against others under the protection of legislative immunity is a coward and is unfit to be a member of the legislature or to hold any other responsible office.

"If you care to sue me for this statement I will be pleased to give you the name of my solicitor, who has instructions to accept the service of any writ you may issue."

Clyne said the wire was in reply to allegations in the legislature as reported by newspapers.
